Introduction

Character Creation
We will be using pencil and paper character sheets. We roll in person for your characters' hit points and use Point Buy for the ability scores.

I will have to check your character sheet prior to the first session just to make sure everything is in order, and to see what abilities or spells you chose.

I ask you to at least have the outline of a backstory for your character before we start. Where were they born and raised? How did their childhood shape them? What is the reason for your character to be away from home? Were they exiled by their family? Are they on the run? Are they looking for something?

Once you get more familiar with the setting, you can develop a fully fleshed out backstory for your character. When you do, don't forget to provide names, general physical descriptions, and anything else of note of important persons from your character's life.

Setting the Tone
I try to set a serious tone for the campaign, but the main goal is to have fun and silliness is welcome if you are considerate of other players and respect the world that I am trying to build. This means that killing every NPC you come across and derailing the plot is behavior that I will not accept.

My preference is to strike a balance between combat and roleplaying and I like to incorporate elements from the player characters' backstories into the campaign. I strive to make the NPCs as realistic as possible and to make the world feel like an organic place where player decisions matter.

We will mainly be using theater of the mind and will limit physical maps to combat and maybe exploration scenarios. We will be leveling up using experience points and not milestones but that does not mean that you will always have to fight for levelling up. Overcoming an encounter by diplomatic means or otherwise will net you at least the same amount of experience points.

My goal is to offer a fun time for everyone (including me) and not to kill your characters. It is still possible that a player's character dies even if I try to match the difficulty of an encounter to the party's capabilities. I am on your side, but I nevertheless expect you to judge based on context if a certain challenge is too difficult for your current level. It can be painful to lose a character, but it is something you should expect to happen at some point.

I do not fudge my dice rolls or dynamically change the capabilities of enemies if they are overwhelming the party because I believe that there should be real stakes in combat. If an NPC has good reason to attack or even kill a character, they will do it. Sometimes your best option is to retreat.

I am not a fan of the DM vs Player mentality and will not actively try to undermine everything you attempt to do. I will only stop you if I believe your actions would break the game, they ignore basic rules of realism and D&D, or make it less enjoyable for the rest of the group.

Since I am certain none of us know every single rule for every single situation, we will be going by whatever feels the most realistic or thematically appropriate at the moment and will look up the rule after the game for future reference. Still, I ask that you make a serious effort to learn the abilities, features, and spells of your character so that we don't have to get out our rulebooks every time you want to use them in combat. Use the time between turns to consider in advance what you want to do once it's your turn.

Being respectful and considerate of other players is essential for an enjoyable game. Everyone wants to look cool and feel powerful, but D&D is not just about the individual. If you have been in a game where one player tries to get all the attention, you know how annoying it can be for the rest. In the same vein, your character can be an asshole if you like but they will need to have a reason to put their destructive tendencies aside and work with the party without trying to kill everyone. Sexual assault and similar behavior will not be permitted.

The same applies to spoilers and metagaming. The starter kits are very popular, and spoilers can sometimes be difficult to avoid. If you are already familiar with some aspects of the campaign, I ask that you do not openly discuss the things you've discovered or intentionally google NPCs, plots, locations, or monsters.

Frequently Asked Questions

How long will this campaign take?
The combined material of both starter kits might take us a few months to get through if we keep a consistent schedule. Beyond that I have a few things outlined already and we might spend a few years on the campaign. We might not always have time for weekly sessions, but it is my goal to form a permanent group of like-minded individuals who enjoy playing Dungeons & Dragons together.

Where will the story start? What should I know when making a character?
The story will start in the town of Phandalin about a week's travel from the city of Neverwinter on the Sword Coast of the Forgotten Realms. The setting of the game could be considered typically medieval and frontier, but the only thing your character needs for the first session is a reason to be on the road, whether it is for a specific trip or a typical day in a life of adventuring.

I don't like roleplaying. Combat is the only reason I play. Any chance you can put more combat in?
I can try and incorporate more combat encounters into the plot if the party agrees, but this is a campaign that will be leaning on roleplaying as well. If you play D&D for combat only, you may be at the wrong table.

I looked up the stats of the monster we are currently fighting, but it makes sense for my character to know them and use their knowledge in combat. Is that all right?
No, it's not. While I can't make you forget what you the player already know, actively looking things up in real life to use them in the game is metagaming. If you believe the character could know something about a creature or location, just ask me and I might let a skill check decide.

What happens if I miss a session?
Either the Dungeon Master or another player will take over your character for that session. They will be played as passively as possible, and I will not tolerate sabotaging or killing your character intentionally. If you know you will miss a few sessions in a row, please do let me know in advance so we can make up a good in-game reason for your character to be absent. For this reason, we generally leave the character sheets with the DM.

What do you mean I can't steal the party's stuff or kill that orphan because they looked at me the wrong way? It's what my character would do!
Then you are playing the wrong character. And you are in the wrong campaign.

Is it all right if I try to romance an NPC or PC?
I am all right with that if you don't make anyone uncomfortable with it and respect that we will be using fade to black if things go further. Keep in mind that I strive to make NPCs act realistically so do not be surprised if they do not reciprocate.

Something happened during the session that made me uncomfortable. How should I go about it?
If you think it is something that is important to be mentioned the moment it is happening, e.g., a topic that triggers you came up, please do not hesitate to speak up. You can talk to me in private or to the group or in the group chat after the session. I'd rather communicate any problems as soon as they turn up instead of trying to ignore them and end up making things worse down the road.

You said that your campaign might not be lighthearted. What exactly do you mean?
Although we will not go into too graphic detail about these things, some topics that might come up are manipulative tactics, torture, child death, psychological warfare, and racism. We will not have people murdering children left and right or psychopaths trying to kidnap people at every corner, but I do not want you to be blindsided if we touch on some darker themes.

Violet Fungus Hivemind

Necrohulk:

Hivemind:

Does not have Spore Bomb back

Lair Effects (in effect while the hivemind is present and conscious in its lair)

1. Living Terrain:
   The ground within 60 feet of the hivemind shifts and is difficult terrain for non-fungal creatures until the start of its next turn. Whenever a creature starts its turn on this ground, it must succeed on a DC 14 Strength save or have its speed halved until the end of its turn.
2. Spore Haze:
   A dense, glittering mist of violet spores floats in the air within 120 feet of the hivemind until the start of its next turn. A creature that casts a spell or uses a magical item must succeed on a concenctraion check with a DC of 10 plus the spell level or the spell fails and the spell slot or charge is consumed.
3. Memory Echoes:
   The hivemind radiates its collective consciousness. Any creature within 120 feet of the hivemind hears a voice from someone they've lost. It must make a DC 14 Wisdom saving throw or have disadvantage on their next attack or saving throw, distracted by the echo.

At the Start of Combat – Round 1:
As battle erupts, the false trees at the edge of the clearing begin to shift subtly—roots twitching, limbs turning inward. Their movement is slow, rhythmic, almost imperceptible at first, like branches swaying to a wind no one feels. The party feels the air grow heavier, damper, thick with spores and silence.
Round 2:
The "trees" are now clearly moving. Their limbs bend in unnatural angles, stretching out and up. Their limbs are starting to interlock.
Round 3:
Now unmistakable: the forest is closing off. The tree limbs above begin to braid together, darkening the space and casting flickering shadows. Visibility drops to dim light. Every breath draws in spore-heavy air.
Round 4:
The trap springs shut. The trees complete their encirclement, forming a sealed dome of living wood and fungal tissue. Above, the canopy closes entirely, sealing out the sky and leaving only a pulsing, dim violet bioluminescence. The clearing is now a claustrophobic space thick with spores, twitching roots, and the smell of rot. There's no clear exit, no visible way out—only the press of enemies, the groan of moving roots, and the thrum of the hivemind's will.

Traits

Legendary Resistance (3/Day, or 4/Day in Lair). If the priest fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Improved Reaper. When the priest casts a necromancy or enchantment spell that targets only one creature, the spell can instead target two creatures within range and within 5 feet of each other.

Inescapable Destruction. Necrotic damage dealt by the priest ignores resistance to necrotic damage.

Shadow Ambush. The priest deals an additional 4d8 necrotic damage when she makes attacks while in dim light or darkness.

Actions

Multiattack. The priest makes two attacks, using Grave Strike or Sickening Ray in any combination.

Grave Strike. Melee Attack Roll: +10, reach 5 ft. Hit: 9 (1d8 + 5) Slashing damage plus 13 (3d8) Necrotic damage.

Sickening Ray. Ranged Attack Roll: +10, range 120 ft. Hit: 16 (2d10 + 5) Necrotic damage, and the target has the Poisoned condition until the start of the priest's next turn.

Dominate (Recharge 5–6). The priest casts Dominate Monster, requiring no spell components and using Wisdom as the spellcasting ability (DC 19).

Spellcasting. The priest casts one of the following spells, using Wisdom as the spellcasting ability (DC 19):

At will: Blindness/Deafness, Darkness, Counterspell, Dispel Magic, Inflict Wounds

2/day each: Antilife Shell, Blight, Dimension Door

Bonus Actions

Shadow Step. If the priest is in dim light or darkness, she magically teleports up to 120 feet to an unoccupied space she can see that is also in dim light or darkness. The next attack roll the priest makes has advantage and if the priest casts a spell or uses an ability that requires a saving throw, that roll is made at disadvantage.

Sanguine Drain. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 19, one creature the priest can see within 30 feet that isn't a Construct or an Undead. Failure: 14 (4d6) Necrotic damage. The target's Hit Point maximum decreases by an amount equal to the damage taken, and the priest regains Hit Points equal to that amount.

Reactions

Radiant Retort. When the priest is hit with radiant damage, it takes no damage and deals double the damage to the attacker.

Move. The priest moves up to its speed without provoking opportunity attacks.

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the priest can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The priest regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Mace. The priest moves up to its Speed, and it makes one Grave Strike or Sickening Ray attack.

Beguile. The priest casts Command, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 19).

Spellcasting. The priest casts a spell.

CR 9 (XP 5,000; PB +4)

Traits

Fey Ancestry. The hound has Advantage on saving throws against being Charmed, and magic can't put it to sleep.

Pack Tactics. The hound has Advantage on attack rolls against a creature if at least one of the hound's allies is within 5 feet of the creature and the ally doesn't have the Incapacitated condition.

Actions

Multiattack. The hound makes three Bite or Slam attacks in any combination.

Bite. Melee Weapon Attack: +11 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 16 (2d8 + 7) piercing damage, plus 7 (2d6) necrotic damage. If the target is a Medium or smaller creature, it is grappled (escape DC 19). The hound can have only one target grappled at a time, and can only attack the grappled creature with Bite until the grapple ends.

Slam. Melee Weapon Attack: +11 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 16 (2d8 + 7) bludgeoning damage. The hound has advantage if it moves at least 10 feet in a straight line before attacking.

Baleful Howl (Recharge 5-6). Wisdom Saving Throw: DC 19, each creature within 500 feet that isn't a hound of darkness. Failure: 45 (10d8) Psychic damage, and the target has the Frightened condition until the start of the hound's next turn. Success: Half damage only.

Plane Shift. The hound is transported to its master on the Shadowfell. Alternatively, it is transported from the Shadowfell to within 500 feet of the location of a creature that is marked by its master.

Bonus Actions

Teleport. The hound teleports up to 60 feet to an unoccupied space it can see.

Reactions

Shadowshift. When an attacker that the hound can see would hit it with an attack roll, it teleports 5 feet to an unoccupied space it can see to avoid the attack.

Chromatic Greatwyrm

The most ancient chromatic dragons, who have survived over twelve hundred years of mortal life and acquired vast hoards worth millions of gold pieces, can achieve a form of apotheosis, reaching a level of power approaching that of Tiamat's mighty aspect. The competitive avarice of dragonkind and the interference of adventurers prevent most dragons from attaining this level of power. But a chromatic dragon who can outwit all rivals and overcome all potential thieves can rise to become one of the mightiest of dragons.

Often a chromatic greatwyrm's ascension involves fusing the power of a single dragon's echoes across different worlds of the Material Plane. The black greatwyrm Chronepsis, for example, is said to have stalked multiple worlds and devoured many of his echoes before withdrawing to a planar lair in the Outlands. The red greatwyrm Ashardalon worked with a balor to ritually drain the power of his echoes, then infused their power into himself by implanting the balor where his heart had been.

In both size and power, chromatic greatwyrms exceed even ancient dragons. The energy of their breath weapons courses over their bodies and glows under their scales, and elemental forces rage around them when they exert their wrath. They no longer need to eat or drink, as their vast hoards magically sustain them. And their power can raze a city to the ground, destroying buildings and defenders alike.

Chromatic Greatwyrm

Gargantuan Dragon (Chromatic), Typically Chaotic Evil

Armor Class 22 (natural armor)
Hit Points 533 (26d20 + 260)
Speed 60 ft., burrow 60 ft., fly 120 ft., swim 60 ft.

STR	DEX	CON	INT	WIS	CHA
30 (+10)	14 (+2)	30 (+10)	21 (+5)	20 (+5)	26 (+8)

Saving Throws Dex +10, Con +18, Wis +13, Cha +16
Skills Intimidation +16, Perception +21, Stealth +10
Damage Immunities acid (black), cold (white), fire (red), lightning (blue), or poison (green)
Condition Immunities charmed, frightened, poisoned
Senses truesight 120 ft., passive Perception 31
Languages Common, Draconic
Challenge 27 (105,000 XP) Proficiency Bonus +8

Chromatic Awakening (Recharges after a Short or Long Rest). If the greatwyrm would be reduced to 0 hit points, its current hit point total instead resets to 425 hit points, it recharges its Breath Weapon, and it regains any expended uses of Legendary Resistance. Additionally, the greatwyrm can now use the options in the "Mythic Actions" section for 1 hour. Award a party an additional 105,000 XP (210,000 XP total) for defeating the greatwyrm after its Chromatic Awakening activates.

Legendary Resistance (4/Day). If the greatwyrm fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Unusual Nature. The greatwyrm doesn't require food or drink.

Actions

Multiattack. The greatwyrm makes one Bite attack and two Claw attacks.

Bite. Melee Weapon Attack: +18 to hit, reach 15 ft., one target. Hit: 21 (2d10 + 10) piercing damage plus 13 (2d12) force damage.

Claw. Melee Weapon Attack: +18 to hit, reach 10 ft., one target. Hit: 19 (2d8 + 10) slashing damage. If the target is a Huge or smaller creature, it is grappled (escape DC 20) and is restrained until this grapple ends. The greatwyrm can have only one creature grappled this way at a time.

Tail. Melee Weapon Attack: +18 to hit, reach 20 ft., one target. Hit: 19 (2d8 + 10) bludgeoning damage. If the target is a creature, it must succeed on a DC 26 Strength saving throw or be knocked prone.

Breath Weapon (Recharge 5–6). The greatwyrm exhales a blast of energy in a 300-foot cone. Each creature in that area must make a DC 26 Dexterity saving throw. On a failed save, the creature takes 78 (12d12) damage of a type determined by the greatwyrm's kind: acid (black), cold (white), fire (red), lightning (blue), or poison (green). On a successful save, the creature takes half as much damage.

Legendary Actions

The greatwyrm can take 3 legendary actions, choosing from the options below. Only one legendary action option can be used at a time and only at the end of another creature's turn. The greatwyrm regains spent legendary actions at the start of its turn.

Attack. The greatwyrm makes one Claw or Tail attack.
Wing Attack (Costs 2 Actions). The greatwyrm beats its wings. Each creature within 30 feet of it must succeed on a DC 26 Dexterity saving throw or take 17 (2d6 + 10) bludgeoning damage and be knocked prone. The greatwyrm can then fly up to half its flying speed.
Arcane Spear (Costs 3 Actions). The greatwyrm creates four spears of magical force. Each spear hits a creature of the greatwyrm's choice it can see within 120 feet of it, dealing 12 (1d8 + 8) force damage to its target, then disappears.

Mythic Actions

If the greatwyrm's Chromatic Awakening trait has activated in the last hour, it can use the options below as legendary actions.

Bite. The greatwyrm makes one Bite attack.
Chromatic Flare (Costs 2 Actions). The greatwyrm flares with elemental energy. Each creature in a 60-foot-radius sphere centered on the greatwyrm must succeed on a DC 26 Dexterity saving throw or take 22 (5d8) damage of a type determined by the greatwyrm's kind: acid (black), cold (white), fire (red), lightning (blue), or poison (green).

Traits

Amphibious. The dragon can breathe air and water.

Legendary Resistance (4/Day, or 5/Day in Lair). If the dragon fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Actions

Multiattack. The dragon makes three Rend attacks. It can replace one attack with a use of Spellcasting to cast Mind Spike (level 5 version).

Rend. Melee Attack Roll: +15, reach 15 ft. Hit: 17 (2d8 + 8) Slashing damage plus 10 (3d6) Poison damage.

Poison Breath (Recharge 5–6). Constitution Saving Throw: DC 22, each creature in a 90-foot Cone. Failure: 77 (22d6) Poison damage. Success: Half damage.

Spellcasting. The dragon casts one of the following spells, requiring no Material components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 21):

At Will: Detect Magic, Mind Spike (level 5 version)
1/Day Each: Geas, Modify Memory

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the dragon can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The dragon regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Mind Invasion. The dragon uses Spellcasting to cast Mind Spike (level 5 version).

Noxious Miasma. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 21, each creature in a 30-foot-radius Sphere centered on a point the dragon can see within 90 feet. Failure: 17 (5d6) Poison damage, and the target takes a –2 penalty to AC until the end of its next turn. Failure or Success: The dragon can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Pounce. The dragon moves up to half its Speed, and it makes one Rend attack.

Skills Perception +7, Stealth +9
Resistances Necrotic
Senses Darkvision 120 ft., Passive Perception 17
Languages Common plus two other languages

Traits

Legendary Resistance (3/Day, or 4/Day in Lair). If the vampire fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Misty Escape. If the vampire drops to 0 Hit Points outside its resting place, the vampire uses Shape-Shift to become mist (no action required). If it can't use Shape-Shift, it is destroyed.

While it has 0 Hit Points in mist form, it can't return to its vampire form, and it must reach its resting place within 2 hours or be destroyed. Once in its resting place, it returns to its vampire form and has the Paralyzed condition until it regains any Hit Points, and it regains 1 Hit Point after spending 1 hour there.

Spider Climb. The vampire can climb difficult surfaces, including along ceilings, without needing to make an ability check.

Vampire Weakness. The vampire has these weaknesses:

Forbiddance. The vampire can't enter a residence without an invitation from an occupant.
Running Water. The vampire takes 20 Acid damage if it ends its turn in running water.
Stake to the Heart. If a weapon that deals Piercing damage is driven into the vampire's heart while the vampire has the Incapacitated condition in its resting place, the vampire has the Paralyzed condition until the weapon is removed.
Sunlight. The vampire takes 20 Radiant damage if it starts its turn in sunlight. While in sunlight, it has Disadvantage on attack rolls and ability checks.

Grave Strike (Vampire Form Only). Melee Attack Roll: +9, reach 5 ft. Hit: 8 (1d8 + 4) Bludgeoning damage plus 7 (2d6) Necrotic damage. If the target is a Large or smaller creature, it has the Grappled condition (escape DC 14) from one of two hands.

Bite (Bat or Vampire Form Only). Constitution Saving Throw: DC 17, one creature within 5 feet that is willing or that has the Grappled, Incapacitated, or Restrained condition. Failure: 6 (1d4 + 4) Piercing damage plus 13 (3d8) Necrotic damage. The target's Hit Point maximum decreases by an amount equal to the Necrotic damage taken, and the vampire regains Hit Points equal to that amount. A Humanoid reduced to 0 Hit Points by this damage and then buried rises the following sunset as a Vampire Spawn under the vampire's control.

Bonus Actions

Charm (Recharge 5–6). The vampire casts Charm Person, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 17), and the duration is 24 hours. The Charmed target is a willing recipient of the vampire's Bite, the damage of which doesn't end the spell. When the spell ends, the target is unaware it was Charmed by the vampire.

Shape-Shift. If the vampire isn't in sunlight or running water, it shape-shifts into a Tiny bat (Speed 5 ft., Fly Speed 30 ft.) or a Medium cloud of mist (Speed 5 ft., Fly Speed 20 ft. [hover]), or it returns to its vampire form. Anything it is wearing transforms with it.

While in bat form, the vampire can't speak. Its game statistics, other than its size and Speed, are unchanged.

While in mist form, the vampire can't take any actions, speak, or manipulate objects. It is weightless and can enter an enemy's space and stop there. If air can pass through a space, the mist can do so, but it can't pass through liquid. It has Resistance to all damage, except the damage it takes from sunlight.

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the vampire can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The vampire regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Beguile. The vampire casts Command, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 17). The vampire can't take this action again until the start of its next turn starts its turn in sunlight. While in sunlight, it has Disadvantage on attack rolls and ability checks.

Actions

Multiattack (Vampire Form Only). The vampire makes two Grave Strike attacks and uses Bite.

components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 17). The vampire can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Deathless Strike. The vampire moves up to half its Speed, and it makes one Grave Strike attack.

Actions

Multiattack. The wight makes two attacks, using Necrotic Sword or Necrotic Bow in any combination. It can replace one attack with a use of Life Drain.

Necrotic Sword. Melee Attack Roll: +4, reach 5 ft. Hit: 6 (1d8 + 2) Slashing damage plus 4 (1d8) Necrotic damage.

Necrotic Bow. Ranged Attack Roll: +4, range 150/600 ft. Hit: 6 (1d8 + 2) Piercing damage plus 4 (1d8) Necrotic damage.

Life Drain. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 13, one creature within 5 feet. Failure: 6 (1d8 + 2) Necrotic damage, and the target's Hit Point maximum decreases by an amount equal to the damage taken.
A Humanoid slain by this attack rises 24 hours later as a Zombie under the wight's control, unless the Humanoid is restored to life or its body is destroyed. The wight can have no more than twelve zombies under its control at a time.

Traits

Legendary Resistance (4/Day, or 5/Day in Lair). If the lich fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Spirit Jar. If destroyed, the lich reforms in 1d10 days if it has a spirit jar, reviving with all its Hit Points. The new body appears in an unoccupied space within the lich's lair.

Actions

Multiattack. The lich makes three attacks, using Eldritch Burst or Paralyzing Touch in any combination.

Eldritch Burst. Melee or Ranged Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. or range 120 ft. Hit: 31 (4d12 + 5) Force damage.

Paralyzing Touch. Melee Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. Hit: 15 (3d6 + 5) Cold damage, and the target has the Paralyzed condition until the start of the lich's next turn.

Spellcasting. The lich casts one of the following spells, using Intelligence as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 20):

At Will: Detect Magic, Detect Thoughts, Dispel Magic, Fireball (level 5 version), Invisibility, Lightning Bolt (level 5 version), Mage Hand, Prestidigitation
2/Day Each: Animate Dead, Dimension Door, Plane Shift
1/Day Each: Chain Lightning, Finger of Death, Power Word Kill, Scrying

Reactions

Protective Magic. The lich casts Counterspell or Shield in response to the spell's trigger, using the same spellcasting ability as Spellcasting.

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the lich can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The lich regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Deathly Teleport. The lich teleports up to 60 feet to an unoccupied space it can see, and each creature within 10 feet of the space it left takes 11 (2d10) Necrotic damage.

Disrupt Life. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 20, each creature that isn't an Undead in a 20-foot Emanation originating from the lich. Failure: 31 (9d6) Necrotic damage. Success: Half damage. Failure or Success: The lich can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Frightening Gaze. The lich casts Fear, using the same spellcasting ability as Spellcasting. The lich can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Life Suppression. Creatures within 90 feet of the dracolich can't regain Hit Points.

Magic Resistance. The dracolich has Advantage on saving throws against spells and other magical effects.

Soul Gem. The dracolich has a magical gem. If the dracolich is destroyed while the gem is on the same plane of existence as it, the dracolich gains a new body in 1d20 days, regaining all its Hit Points and appearing within 5 feet of the gem.

The gem is a Tiny object that has AC 25; HP 100; and Immunity to Necrotic, Poison, and Psychic damage. The gem regains all its Hit Points at the end of every turn, but it turns to dust if reduced to 0 Hit Points. If the gem is destroyed, the dracolich can create a new one by completing an 8-hour ritual using a gem worth 2,000+ GP and by expending 10,000 GP, which the ritual consumes.

Actions

Multiattack. The dracolich makes three Rend attacks. It can replace one attack with a use of Spellcasting to cast Ray of Sickness (level 4 version).

Rend. Melee Attack Roll: +16, reach 15 ft. Hit: 20 (2d10 + 9) Slashing damage plus 9 (2d8) Necrotic damage.

Necrotic Breath (Recharge 5–6). Constitution Saving Throw: DC 23, each creature in a 90-foot Cone. Failure: 65 (10d12) Necrotic damage. Success: Half damage.

Spellcasting. The dracolich casts one of the following spells, requiring no Material components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 22, +14 to hit with spell attacks):

At Will: Detect Magic, Ray of Sickness (level 4 version)
1/Day Each: Create Undead (level 9 version), Finger of Death, Circle of Death

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the dracolich can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The dracolich regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Pounce. The dracolich moves up to half its Speed, and it makes one Rend attack.

Sickening Ray. The dracolich uses Spellcasting to cast Ray of Sickness (level 4 version).

Terrifying Presence. Wisdom Saving Throw: DC 22, each creature in a 45-foot Emanation originating from the dracolich. Failure: 17 (3d10) Psychic damage, and the target has the Frightened condition until the end of its next turn. Failure or Success: The dracolich can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Traits

Vigilant. The bodyguard cannot be surprised.

Ward. The bodyguard is dedicated to the protection of another creature, called its ward. This has the following effects:

Defensive Positioning. As long as the bodyguard is within 5 feet of its ward and is not Incapacitated, attacks against the ward have Disadvantage, and the ward has Advantage on Dexterity saving throws.
Coordinated Initiative. After Initiative is rolled, the bodyguard may choose to ignore its Initiative roll and instead act immediately after its ward in Initiative.

The bodyguard can spend 1 minute committing itself to the protection of a new ward, at which point the former ward's protection ends.

Actions

Multiattack. The bodyguard makes three Morningstar attacks. It can replace one attack with a Shield Bash attack.

Morningstar. Melee Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. Hit: 37 (7d8 + 6) Piercing damage.

Shield Bash. Melee Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. Hit: 16 (3d10) Bludgeoning damage, and the target has the Prone condition if it is Medium or smaller.

Reunite. The bodyguard magically teleports, along with any equipment it is wearing or carrying, to an unoccupied space within 5 feet of its ward. This ability functions even if the ward is on a different plane of existence than the bodyguard.

Reactions

Tireless Protector. Trigger: A creature within 5 feet is hit by an attack or makes a saving throw against a spell with no other targets. Response: If the creature was hit by an attack, the attack hits the bodyguard instead. If the creature was the target of a spell, the bodyguard magically switches the target of the spell to itself and automatically fails its first saving throw against the spell.

If the bodyguard uses this ability to protect its ward, the bodyguard's Reaction is not consumed.

Vampire Lairs

Vampires and vampire umbral lords create sanctuaries apart from the living, whether hidden in cosmopolitan cities or sequestered in ruins where they dwelled in life.

The region containing a vampire's lair is warped by its presence, creating the following effects:

Children of the Night. The vampire exerts influence over the animals in its domain. From dusk until dawn, Large or smaller Beasts have the Charmed condition while within 2 miles of the lair.

Looming Shadows. Shadows within 2 miles of the lair seem to move as if alive. Any creature (excluding the vampire and its allies) that finishes a Short Rest while within 2 miles of the lair must succeed on a DC 18 Wisdom saving throw or gain no benefit from that rest.

Mists. The area within 2 miles of the lair is Heavily Obscured beyond 10 feet by a persistent, creeping fog. The vampire and any creatures of its choice are unaffected by the fog.

If the vampire dies or moves its lair elsewhere, these effects end immediately.

Shadow Escape. If the vampire drops to 0 Hit Points outside its resting place, it teleports into its resting place unless it is in running water or sunlight. If it can't teleport, it is destroyed. Once inside its resting place, it has the Paralyzed condition for 1 hour, after which it regains 1 Hit Point.

Vampire Weakness. The vampire has these weaknesses:

Forbiddance. The vampire can't enter a residence without an invitation from an occupant.
Running Water. The vampire takes 20 Acid damage if it ends its turn in running water.
Stake to the Heart. If a weapon that deals Piercing damage is driven into the vampire's heart while the vampire has the Incapacitated condition in its resting place, the vampire has the Paralyzed condition until the weapon is removed.
Sunlight. The vampire takes 20 Radiant damage if it starts its turn in sunlight. While in sunlight, it has Disadvantage on attack rolls and ability checks.

Actions

Multiattack. The vampire makes three attacks, using Grave Strike or Sickening Ray in any combination.

Grave Strike. Melee Attack Roll: +13, reach 5 ft. Hit: 16 (2d8 + 7) Slashing damage plus 18 (4d8) Necrotic damage.

Sickening Ray. Ranged Attack Roll: +14, range 120 ft. Hit: 25 (3d10 + 8) Necrotic damage, and the target has the Poisoned condition until the start of the vampire's next turn.

Dominate Monster (Recharge 5–6). The vampire casts Dominate Monster, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 21).

Bonus Actions

Sanguine Drain. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 21, one creature the vampire can see within 60 feet that isn't a Construct or an Undead. Failure: 21 (6d6) Necrotic damage. The target's Hit Point maximum decreases by an amount equal to the damage taken, and the vampire regains Hit Points equal to that amount.

Legendary Actions

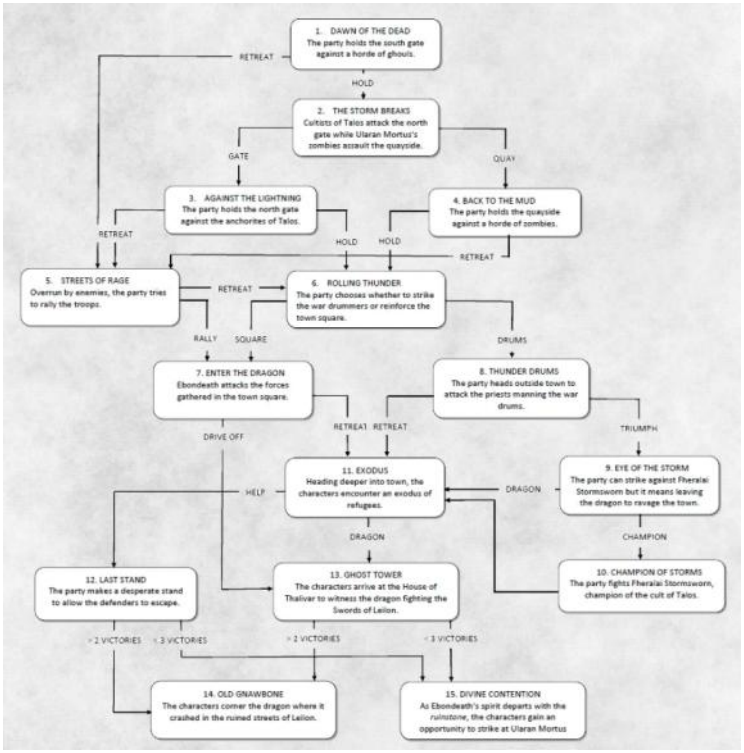

Legendary Action Uses: 4 (5 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the vampire can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The vampire regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Masterful Beguiling. The vampire casts Command (level 2 version), requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 21). The vampire can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Challenge 26 (90,000 XP) Proficiency Bonus +8

Legendary Resistance (5/Day). If Vecna fails a saving throw, he can choose to succeed instead.

Special Equipment. Vecna carries a magic dagger named Afterthought. In the hands of anyone other than Vecna, Afterthought is a +2 Dagger.

Undying. If Vecna is slain, his soul refuses to accept its fate and lives on as a disembodied spirit that fashions a new body for itself after 1d100 years. Vecna's new body appears within 100 miles of where he was slain. When the new body is complete, Vecna regains all his hit points and becomes active again.

Actions

Multiattack. Vecna uses Flight of the Damned (if available), Rotten Fate, or Spellcasting. He then makes two attacks with Afterthought.

Afterthought. Melee Weapon Attack: +13 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) piercing damage plus 9 (2d8) necrotic damage. If the target is a creature, it is afflicted by entropic magic, taking 9 (2d8) necrotic damage at the start of each of its turns. Immediately after taking this damage on its turn, the target must make a DC 20 Constitution saving throw, ending the effect on itself on a success. Until it succeeds on this save, the afflicted target can't regain hit points.

Flight of the Damned (Recharge 5–6). Vecna conjures a torrent of flying, spectral entities that fill a 120-foot cone and pass through all creatures in that area before dissipating. Each creature in that area must make a DC 22 Constitution saving throw. On a failed save, the creature takes 36 (8d8) necrotic damage and has the frightened condition for 1 minute. On a successful save, the creature takes half as much damage only. A frightened creature can repeat the saving throw at the end of each of its turns, ending the effect on itself on a success.

Rotten Fate. Vecna causes necrotic magic to engulf one creature he can see within 120 feet of himself. The target must make a DC 22 Constitution saving throw, taking 96 (8d8 + 60) necrotic damage on a failed save or half as much damage on a successful one. A Humanoid killed by this magic rises as a zombie at the start of Vecna's next turn and acts immediately after Vecna in the initiative order. The zombie is under Vecna's control.

Spellcasting. Vecna casts one of the following spells, requiring no material components and using Intelligence as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 22):

At will: Animate Dead (as an action), Detect Magic, Dispel Magic, Fly, Lightning Bolt, Mage Hand, Prestidigitation

2/day each: Dimension Door, Invisibility, Scrying (as an action)

1/day each: Dominate Monster, Globe of Invulnerability, Plane Shift (self only)

Bonus Actions

Vile Teleport. Vecna teleports, along with any equipment he is wearing or carrying, up to 30 feet to an unoccupied space he can see. He can cause each creature of his choice within 15 feet of his destination space to take 10 (3d6) psychic damage. If at least one creature takes this damage, Vecna regains 80 hit points.

Reactions

Vecna can take up to three reactions per round but only one per turn.

Dread Counterspell. Vecna utters a dread word to interrupt a creature he can see that is casting a spell. If the spell is 4th level or lower, it fails and has no effect. If the spell is 5th level or higher, Vecna makes an Intelligence check (DC 10 plus the spell's level). On a successful check, the spell fails and has no effect. Whatever the spell's level, the caster takes 10 (3d6) psychic damage if the spell fails.

Fell Rebuke. In response to being hit by an attack, Vecna utters a fell word, dealing 10 (3d6) necrotic damage to the attacker, and Vecna teleports, along with any equipment he is wearing or carrying, up to 30 feet to an unoccupied space he can see.

Traits

Legendary Resistance (4/Day, or 5/Day in Lair). If the lich fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Spirit Jar. If destroyed, the lich reforms in 1d10 days if it has a spirit jar, reviving with all its Hit Points. The new body appears in an unoccupied space within the lich's lair.

Actions

Multiattack. The lich makes three attacks, using Eldritch Burst or Paralyzing Touch in any combination.

Eldritch Burst. Melee or Ranged Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. or range 120 ft. Hit: 31 (4d12 + 5) Force damage.

Paralyzing Touch. Melee Attack Roll: +12, reach 5 ft. Hit: 15 (3d6 + 5) Cold damage, and the target has the Paralyzed condition until the start of the lich's next turn.

Spellcasting. The lich casts one of the following spells, using Intelligence as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 20):

At Will: Detect Magic, Detect Thoughts, Dispel Magic, Fireball (level 5 version), Invisibility, Lightning Bolt (level 5 version), Mage Hand, Prestidigitation
2/Day Each: Animate Dead, Dimension Door, Plane Shift

Reactions

Protective Magic. The lich casts Counterspell or Shield in response to the spell's trigger, using the same spellcasting ability as Spellcasting.

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the lich can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The lich regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Deathly Teleport. The lich teleports up to 60 feet to an unoccupied space it can see, and each creature within 10 feet of the space it left takes 11 (2d10) Necrotic damage.

Disrupt Life. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 20, each creature that isn't an Undead in a 20-foot Emanation originating from the lich. Failure: 31 (9d6) Necrotic damage. Success: Half damage. Failure or Success: The lich can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Frightening Gaze. The lich casts Fear, using the same spellcasting ability as Spellcasting. The lich can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

CR 30 (155,000 XP; PB +9)

Traits

Legendary Resistance (6/Day). If the colossus fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Magic Resistance. The colossus has Advantage on saving throws against spells and magical effects.

Mycelial Regeneration. The colossus regains 30 Hit Points at the start of each of its turns. If it took Fire or Radiant damage since the end of its last turn, this trait does not function at the start of its next turn.

Corpse Amalgam. The colossus cannot have the Prone condition, cannot be moved against its will, and its form cannot be changed.

Spore-Saturated Body. A creature that starts its turn within 20 feet of the colossus makes a DC 27 Constitution saving throw. Failure: 18 (4d8) Necrotic damage, and the creature has the Poisoned condition until the start of its next turn. Success: Half damage only.

Veylar Anchor. While Veylar is embedded in the colossus, the colossus has Resistance to all damage. If damage would reduce the colossus below 150 Hit Points, the colossus is reduced to 150 Hit Points instead, and Veylar takes the remaining damage.

Actions

Multiattack. The colossus makes four Grasping Corpse-Limb attacks and one Crushing Mass attack.

Grasping Corpse-Limb. Melee Attack Roll: +19, reach 20 ft. Hit: 28 (4d8 + 10) Bludgeoning damage plus 18 (4d8) Necrotic damage. If the target is a Huge or smaller creature, it has the Grappled condition, escape DC 20.

Grasping Corpse-Limb. Melee Attack Roll: +19, reach 20 ft. Hit: 28 (4d8 + 10) Bludgeoning damage plus 18 (4d8) Necrotic damage. If the target is a Huge or smaller creature, it has the Grappled condition, escape DC 20.

Crushing Mass. Melee Attack Roll: +19, reach 15 ft. Hit: 45 (10d6 + 10) Bludgeoning damage. If the target is Grappled by the colossus, it also takes 22 (4d10) Necrotic damage.

Spore Vomit (Recharge 5-6). Constitution Saving Throw: DC 27, each creature in a 150-foot Cone. Failure: 63 (14d8) Necrotic damage plus 27 (6d8) Poison damage, and the target has the Poisoned condition for 1 minute. Success: Half damage only. A Poisoned target repeats the save at the end of each of its turns, ending the condition on itself on a success.

Bonus Actions

Drag Inward. Each creature Grappled by the colossus is pulled up to 20 feet straight toward it.

Lurch. The colossus moves up to half its Speed without provoking Opportunity Attacks.

Legendary Actions

The colossus can take 3 Legendary Actions per round, choosing from the options below. It regains spent Legendary Actions at the start of its turn.

Limb Strike. The colossus makes one Grasping Corpse-Limb attack.

Spore Burst. Constitution Saving Throw: DC 27, each creature of the colossus's choice within 30 feet. Failure: 27 (6d8) Necrotic damage plus 27 (6d8) Poison damage, and the target cannot regain Hit Points until the end of its next turn. Success: Half damage only.

Assimilate Corpse (Costs 1 Action). The colossus absorbs nearby dead matter and regains 50 Hit Points.

Outer Realm Reversal. Wisdom Saving Throw: DC 27, one creature the colossus can sense within 120 feet. Failure: The colossus teleports the target up to 90 feet to an unoccupied space it can see, and the target takes 22 (4d10) Psychic damage. Success: No effect.

Lair Actions

On Initiative Count 20, losing initiative ties, the colossus uses one lair action. It cannot use the same lair action two rounds in a row.

Corpse Tide. The colossus burrows underground in its current space as the battlefield collapses inward. Each creature of the colossus's choice within 120 feet must make a DC 27 Strength saving throw. Failure: 27 (6d8) Bludgeoning damage plus 27 (6d8) Necrotic damage, and the creature is pulled up to 30 feet straight toward the space where the colossus burrowed. If it ends within 5 feet of that space, it also has the Prone condition. Success: Half damage only, and the creature is not pulled. The colossus remains underground with Total Cover until it uses its Burrow speed to emerge.

Spore Bloom Detonation. Three fungal blooms erupt at points the colossus can sense within 120 feet. Each bloom occupies a 10-foot-radius sphere and lasts until Initiative Count 20 on the next round. The areas are Heavily Obscured. When a creature enters a bloom's area for the first time on a turn or starts its turn there, it makes a DC 27 Constitution saving throw. Failure: 22 (4d10) Poison damage, and the creature has the Poisoned condition until the end of its next turn. Success: Half damage only. At Initiative Count 20 on the next round, each bloom detonates in a 20-foot-radius sphere, then vanishes. Each creature in the area makes a DC 27 Dexterity saving throw. Failure: 44 (8d10) Necrotic damage, and the creature has the Prone condition. Success: Half damage only.

throw. Failure: 44 (8d10) Necrotic damage, and the creature has the Prone condition. Success: Half damage only.

Grave-Limb Snare. The lair grabs up to three creatures the colossus can sense within 120 feet. Each target makes a DC 27 Dexterity saving throw. Failure: The target has the Grappled and Restrained conditions until Initiative Count 20 on the next round. While Restrained this way, the target takes 18 (4d8) Necrotic damage at the start of its turn. Success: The target moves up to 10 feet without provoking Opportunity Attacks. A Restrained creature can use its action to make a DC 27 Strength (Athletics) or Dexterity (Acrobatics) check, ending the effect on itself on a success.

Outer Realm Reversal. The colossus chooses up to four creatures it can sense within 120 feet. Each target makes a DC 27 Wisdom saving throw. Failure: The colossus teleports the target up to 90 feet to an unoccupied space it can see, and the target takes 22 (4d10) Psychic damage. Success: No effect.

Corpsefield Renewal. The colossus absorbs dead matter through the forest and regains 90 Hit Points. It also ends one condition currently affecting it.

Early sessions with Hyppolite, Friyola, and Keth Thok. Keth aided a high elf wizard Hypolite against a goblin ambush and the latter decided to hire the orc who agreed to the deal provided he would still be able to follow up on clues regarding the whereabouts of his mother. The two travelled to Phandalin together where they met Friyola. Among other things, they fight a manticore who is chased off by a white dragon and inadvertently saves the party from certain death.

Daring Dozen 2

Sunday, 7 November 2021 17:11

The party leaves Cragmaw Hideout and accompanies Sildar Hallwinter back to Phandalin. On the way they encounter twig blights being chased by a fire elemental but do not intervene in the hunt. When they arrive in Phandalin, they spend a night at Stonehill Inn after which Sildar leaves them to arrange the reward of 50 gold he promised the party. Friyola does not trust Sildar, however, and convinces him to leave his sword in case he wants to run away without paying the party.

Daring Dozen 3

Sunday, 28 November 2021 17:11

Hyppolite meets Cornelius at the tavern the morning the party encountered the Redbrand Ruffians. They talk about their interests and Hyppolite mentions to Cornelius that they are going to visit the Dwarven Excavation Site and Cornelius asks to be included in the party when they depart for the site. The three are attacked by four thugs shortly after. They soundly defeat the thugs, killing one.

Daring Dozen 4

Friday, 3 December 2021 17:11

Friyola suddenly disappears and Keth follows her, shouting that he would be back. Cornelius and Hyppolite sneak out of town to evade the Redbrand ruffians and start their journey to the excavation site. The party is shortly after joined by Koshra and together they fight off wolves that attack them on their way to the site.

Slinn Dancer is on the run from the Casselanter family. They and Polina have been heading north by way of the hills of the Sword Mountains and one night find themselves in the ruins of an ancient temple. They decide to camp there and meet the party the following morning. They join them and provide muscle for the party for clearing the excavation site. They easily dispatch two ochre jellies and take a short rest.

Daring Dozen 6

Friday, 17 December 2021 17:11

The party explores the rest of the temple and encounters another ochre jelly that almost kills Slinn. Having cleared the temple, they collect the reward from Townmaster Harbin Wester and Eed (played by Jam) manages to charm him magically to cheat him off an extra 53 gold. The session ends on 16th of Eleint (9) 1491.

Daring Dozen 7

Friday, 28 January 2022 17:11

The party decides to travel to Cragmaw Castle to rescue Gundren Rockseeker and learn about the location of the Lost Mines. As they enter the Neverwinter Forest at its southern edge, they are surprised by a small band of orcs led by Udrok Pest-Strangler who tell them about the location of the goblin fortress. While resting the party and the orcs are ambushed by a large group of goblins. 18th of Eleint, very early morning.

Daring Dozen 8

Friday, 11 February 2022 17:11

The party fails to take the castle and is beaten back and chased through the forest. They are eventually captured by goblins, but Eed suddenly transforms and scares the goblins to the bone and makes them flee. They reflect on what went wrong as they nurse their bruised bodies and souls. Maybe they could have succeeded at the rescue mission if they had prevented the goblins to flee and had not let the other ones go. Maybe they could have arrived at the castle sooner if they had left the horses behind and hurried. Maybe they could have watched the castle and looked for weak points. They decide to go back to Phandalin to find better equipment or reinforcements to take the castle. Or maybe look for clues on who this Black Spider is that put a bounty on them.

Friday, 8 April 2022 17:11

Highharvestide: Preparations are being made for the celebrations. Many-colored triangle flags are being hung on buildings across the main streets. Small stalls and tables are being setup.
Once set up:

- Tavern brawl
- Arm wrestling contest
- Unique beer (cherry or ginger)
- Extremely hot chili (con save DC 10)

Miner's Exchange: As you approach the Miner's Exchange that has been pointed out to you by Bren, you notice a smaller building next to it that in contrast to most of the other buildings is of a more elaborate construction design than of the simple and cheap log cabin style. The actual Miner's Exchange appears to be the tallest building in town (3-storied) and though less intricate than the small house next to it, it stands out with its rich brown wood and white brick construction. Once inside, you are greeted by an older gentleman (gray hair, receding hairline, average height, vest, gray clothes). There are several other employees (gnomish woman with a pixie cut, half-elf with ambiguous features). The first room is filled with small desks, paper stacks, scrolls, various tool such as compasses and abacuses. The older man leads you to Halia Thornton's office adjacent to the main room on the first floor. There's a big desk with neatly organized stacks of paper and writing utensils. Behind a dark desk sits Halia Thornton.
"Welcome to the Miner's Exchange. Unfortunately, I can't offer seats to all of you but make yourselves as comfortable as possible."

Session: The meeting with Halia does not go very well because Dio tries to sneak a peek at a document on Halia's desk. She kicks them out and further attempts by Cornelius to smooth things over are not successful.
So, the party decides to take care of the Redbrand gang that has been causing trouble in Phandalin. They manage to defeat a few Redbrands and bugbears, but Glasstaff eludes their grasp. There are hints of him having been present though. 28th of Elein, early afternoon.

Aersius and Hope meet at the tavern and decide to join forces to investigate the Redbrand base because Aersius has a grudge against the gang since they beat her senseless and left her to die in the streets. Hope is investigating a lead of the presence of kobolds in the Neverwinter Woods and looking for reinforcement. The two find the secret cave entrance to the Redbrand headquarters and encounter a mysterious creature there who speaks to them telepathically and can deal necrotic damage. They run from it and meet the rest of the party. The entire party is ambushed by 5 Redbrand thugs but dispatch them with ease. There is major disagreement on how to handle the last of the thugs who surrendered. - Eed: Expanded spell list, spell slot explanation, remember to upcast spells, just to make sure: spell slots are restored on a short rest
- Brad: Spells known, expended, and Cure Wounds prepared?
- Dio: Fey touched spells? Still exhausted? Expertise in two skills? 2nd level spell at 4th level, replace old spell with new spell at level up
- Cornelius: 4th cantrip? Why 16 spells and not 14? Tinkering with magic spying glass
- Aersius: Abyssal language? Feral tiefling
- Hope: Clarify last session's confusion about Flurry of Blows: Immediately after you used the Attack action, spend 1 ki point to make two unarmed strikes as a bonus action. Generally, with Martial Arts from Monk: When you use the Attack action with an unarmed strike or a monk weapon on your turn, you can make one unarmed strike as a bonus action. It's pronounced Monk, by the way :P
- Talking over each other, and jumping in. I later realized that it was way too much for me and I could not focus on particular players meaningfully
- Remind me to play appropriate music and keep an eye on the time since I am very focused on the game as a DM
- Ask everyone why they play D&D to give everyone an idea what the others are looking for in a game of D&D
- Remember to keep track of your hit dice and remember that you only get half back on a long rest
- Please stay in front of the DM screen. It makes me nervous because sometimes I might have something I don't want you to see
- A little bit too much arguing during the game (you can voice your concern once, the rest we can discuss after)

- Wyvern Tor (optional): The party has been given the task by Harbin Wester, the Townmaster, to drive away some orcs that have been camping and raiding at Wyvern Tor. They also know that the Many-Arrows orcs that they met 10 days ago (18th of Eleint) on their way to Cragmaw Castle were looking for those orcs for some reason.
- Agatha's Lair: Sister Garaele would like the party to seek out Agatha the witch to ask her about the location of Bowgentle's spellbook. Sister Garaele advises the party to treat Agatha with utmost respect and gives the party a silver comb as a gift for Agatha. Her home is close to Conyberry.
- Thundertree Ruins (druid Reidoth): Qeline Alderleaf of Alderleaf Farm told Bradwick of Reidoth the druid who is very knowledgeable about the area and might help the party find what they are looking for. Reidoth offers to accompany them to Wave Echo Cave if they chase away the green dragon.
- Conyberry/ Old Owl Well (Hamun Kost): Sildar Hallwinter told Cornelius that there have been reports of strange happenings in the area around Conyberry. Someone also seems to be excavating there.

The party report back to Sildar and receive leads from him and other NPCs in town. Eed prays to Tymora goddess of luck while looking for clues but is visited by her patron the same night. They decide to follow up on the Conyberry lead and travel there. On their way they are accosted by three manticores who are looking for Hyppolite. The party manage to deceive the monstrosities and merely have to sacrifice 3 of their horses to get away unscathed. Bradwick gets a hint about the identity of his source of power as a paladin in exchange for helping her in a very non-specific way. Cornelius exchanges his dragon eyes for knowledge about what he is looking for. He is told to go to the tower. Aersius is told to feed her raven raw seeds. Dio does not agree on a deal with her but threatens her. The witch seemed to be interested in carving out his face afterwards. Eed is yet to talk to her. Wednesday, 26 October 2022 17:11

The party returns to Phandalin and performs an epic retelling of their quest at the inn. While Dio and Brad are busy doing that, Eed and Aersius notice two suspicious characters watching them and shortly after leaving the inn. Aersius and Eed pursue and manage to follow them back to the woods next to the Tresendar manor. Cornelius collects Brad and Dio and the three follow Eed and Aersius and get ambushed by a group of humans of which one was the woman who was present at the inn. Aersius and Eed follow the other suspicious character, a heavily-clothed man with almost claw-like hands, and notice him entering the cave system underneath the manor. When Cornelius casts a fireball into the attacking human group, the clawed man returns with company and a three-sided battle ensues.

Friday, 11 November 2022 17:11

The party manages to defeat the clawed man who turns out to be a very nimble vampire with ghoul followers. They do so with the help of the humans who are convinced to fall in line after their leader Velleen gets taken down and shortly after mercifully revived by Bradwick. While fighting, it is revealed that Velleen also carries to beads similar to the one Bradwick has. Upon her defeat, Brad demands one of her marbles.

Friday, 18 November 2022 17:11

The party get some downtime, sell loot, tie up some loose ends, report to Sildar Hallwinter and gather intel. Dio gets a new assignment from Halia Thornton. Watch the religious cults and gain influence in Leilon. After reconvening they travel towards Reidoth's location and make a stop at Dragon's Barrow. They circle the barrow and notice three dancing lights above one of the rocks atop the hill. Bradwick approaches the lights and identifies them to be of undead origin.

Note: Make will-o'-wisps retreat below again!

Friday, 9 December 2022 17:11

- Wyvern Tor (optional): The party has been given the task by Harbin Wester to drive away a band of orcs that have been seen at Wyvern Tor. They also know that the Many-Arrows orcs that they met over a month ago (18th of Eleint) on their way to Cragmaw Castle were looking for these orcs.
- Thundertree Ruins (druid Reidoth): Qeline Alderleaf of Alderleaf Farm told Bradwick of Reidoth the druid who is very knowledgeable about the area and might help the party find what they are looking for. Reidoth offers to accompany them to Wave Echo Cave if they chase away the green dragon.
- Bradwick: tie in "looking into the sun" and his promise to help Agatha, maybe have him dream of a sun? Have him have blurry visions of a snowy peak?
- Cornelius: roll WIS and/or CON check for memory or fading health, don't forget to convey hounds still chasing them, howls in the distance when no encounter is happening

The party manage to find a way inside the dragon barrow and get their hands on the Dragon Slayer. They are attacked by 3 wisps, one of which flees after being badly hurt and one Invisible Stalker who chases them outside of the barrow.

The party enters Wave Echo Cave and meets the Black Spider and Glasstaff. They negotiate and he hires them to kill a Death Tyrant and offers them the help of Glasstaff for this task. They defeat the undead but Glasstaff dies and Aersius gets turned to stone by one of the undead's rays. 10th of Uktar, midday.

Daring Dozen 43

Friday, 12 May 2023 17:11

The party negotiates with the Black Spider, and he offers them the opportunity to work with him. For 10k gold they are to liberate the town of Leilon that is overrun by undead creatures. They agree and cart Aersius away. They travel along the Triboar trail towards the crossroads. 11th of Uktar, evening.

Daring Dozen 44

Friday, 19 May 2023 17:11

At the crossroads the party encounters 5 zombies trying to break into an inn and are ambushed by two shadowy forms when they rush to the rescue. Bradwick dies during this fight, but the Daring Dozen prevail in the end. They prepare to bury Bradwick. 11th of Uktar, night.

Daring Dozen 45

Friday, 9 June 2023 17:11

The party buries Bradwick and meets Crack. They decide to travel together and continue south towards Leilon. On their way, they hear the hounds' howls again. 12th of Uktar, evening.

Daring Dozen 46

Sunday, 18 June 2023 17:11

The party is surrounded by 3 hounds of darkness that let out a terrifying howl and frighten the party. A fight ensues that the hounds seem to win but then Dio turns the tides by casting Hypnotic Gaze successfully on all the hounds. When one of the hounds finally gets free, it grabs Cornelius and tries to escape with him but is forced to let him go when its life is threatened. Just before Cornelius deals the deathblow to it, the hound's face transforms into a featureless visage that says, "Don't resist. Come to me." After the hounds are dispatched, Cornelius and Crack discuss the possible reasons for the hounds chasing the former and try to figure out the connection with his husband. Cornelius does remember the featureless visage during the funeral as the face of his husband but determines that this was a false memory planted by the Nightwalker. Sometime later they are visited by two bards who seek safety in numbers along the journey (Silla Scalesweep and Tarbin Tul). They have some reservations towards them but decide to share their magical hut with them, nevertheless. On their night watch, they hear and see a giant dark form searching above their heads. They decide to not take any action and keep quiet to not alert the dark form. Expenses paid. 13th of Uktar, morning.

Daring Dozen 47

Friday, 30 June 2023 17:11

The party meets 4 officers of the Neverwinter guard on their way to Leilon and are also ambushed by an Invisible Stalker. When they reach the town, they encounter about 50 people milling about and shouting over each other, arguing. They were told that the town was attacked and is unsafe. Merrygold tasked them to save two children and the fishermen and that she would be able to restore Aersius to life if they brought her a diamond from the temple within the town. Just when they discuss their next course of action, they are attacked by humanoid riders on water horses. 13th of Uktar, evening.

Daring Dozen 48

Friday, 14 July 2023 17:11

The party defeats the waterhorse-riders and have to deal with the betrayal of Grognor. They kill both parties and rush to the swamp-side of town where they can see a tiefling raising her arms and chanting. A storm cloud is brewing. 13th of Utkar, evening.

Daring Dozen 49

Friday, 21 July 2023 17:11

The party defeats the elementals and save the fishermen and soldiers. They proceed towards the temple of the Dawnfather where they find the missing children. They find some diamond dust as well and bring it to Merrygold who heals Aersius, who in turn decides to leave the party as adventuring with them is too dangerous.

Cornelius discovers more about the Nightwalker who seems to need some sacrifice to trade places with it to enter the Material Plane from the Negative Plane. Kerri considers the possibility that it might have some connection with the wizard's dead husband who did do some unknown research.

While sleeping, Eed wanders off and is not seen again. Kerri notices her trance-like states as she leaves into the night.

The party takes a long rest and visit a store with oddities owned by an Illuskan man named Aubrey Silverspurn who tells Dio that he gets a lot of his wares from merchants who have actually missed their expected return date. He does not know much about their trade deals and contracts in general though. 14th of Utkar, morning.

Daring Dozen 50

Friday, 4 August 2023 17:11

While Dio and Cornelius shop and gather information, Kerri meets two strangers, both half-elves who are also enquiring into the strange weather patterns. After some negotiation they decide to climb the House of Thalivar and encounter 3 soldiers on their way up who seem concerned and move away from the tower. Yalda panics after being questioned about her magic fog cloud and attacks one of the guards. The party sees no choice but to dispatch the guards and hide their bodies inside Swift's Bag of Holding. They enter the tower after unlocking its gates via the Knock spell. 14th of Uktar, late morning.

Daring Dozen 51

Sunday, 13 August 2023 17:11

The party investigates the tower and confronts the ghost of Thalivar. 14th of Uktar, midday.

Daring Dozen 52

Friday, 18 August 2023 17:11

The party defeats the ghost of Thalivar and free it from the Material Plane. After a long rest, they then hurry towards the Wayside Inn and the growing storm that gathers around it. 16th of Uktar, morning.

Daring Dozen 53

Friday, 25 August 2023 17:11

On their way to the inn, they encounter a guard who warns them of the dangers facing them. The party enters the storm and is beset by air elementals. 17th of Uktar, late evening.

Daring Dozen 54

Friday, 1 September 2023 17:11

They send the elemental back to their home plane and continue towards the center of the storm, the inn's location. They continue to be hit by lightning storms. When they reach the inn, they notice 7 individuals from Leilon being impaled to the gates of the inn. They successfully free and heal them and plan their next course of action. 17th of Uktar, night.

Daring Dozen 55

Friday, 6 October 2023 17:11

Daring Dozen 57

Wednesday, 18 October 2023 17:11

The party meet a druid named Woodruff who also experiences memory loss. This connection is not lost on Cornelius who also deals with gaps in his memory. The party rests at the inn and when they wake, the inn owner is missing, along with one of the horses. They take the remaining two animals and continue towards Leilon and the Mere of Dead Men. On their way there while sleeping inside their wizard's Tiny Hut, they are accosted by a mysterious man who is most likely a vampire who wants to "ask Cornelius questions" and wants him to come with him. The confrontation comes to a head when the session ends. 19th of Uktar, early morning.

Daring Dozen 58

Friday, 27 October 2023 17:11

The party fights the mysterious man who tries to escape by turning into mist but is destroyed by Cornelius at the last second. The Hounds of Darkness also join the fight.

Summary:

The party finishes off the hounds and continues to travel to Leilon.

Daring Dozen 61

Wednesday, 22 November 2023 17:11

The party arrives at Leilon and is told of missing patrols and merchants. They want to investigate this and enter the Mere of Dead Men where they are attacked by rotting trolls.

Daring Dozen 62

Friday, 8 December 2023 17:11

The party are in the Mere of Dead Men. When Yalda invokes her birthright, they are engulfed by darkness and attacked by what seems to be the Nightwalker.

Daring Dozen 63

Wednesday, 17 January 2024 17:11

The party manages to banish the avatar of the Nightwalker but Dio and Keri breathe their last.

Daring Dozen 64

Wednesday, 7 February 2024 17:11

The players encounter a tribe of lizardfolk who are using giant snails for transportation. They have people in cages and are presumably eating them. Among them is Green, Timo's new character. They rescue Green and fight their way out.

Daring Dozen 65

Monday, 12 February 2024 17:11

The party is pursued by the lizardfolk but manage to escape. They bury Keri and Dio.

Daring Dozen 66

Thursday, 22 February 2024 17:11

The party arrives in Waterdeep via Cornelius' spell Teleportation Circle. They arrive at the City of the Dead, the local cemetery, using the Harpers' circle. They are greeted by Thestryl Mellardin, a female Chondathan human mage.

Daring Dozen 67

Tuesday, 5 March 2024 17:11

The party meets Cornelius's niece who runs the bookstore for him. Cornelius tries to uncover any secrets within the store related to his late husband. They uncover a secret door in Lenu's basement office.

Daring Dozen 68

Friday, 12 April 2024 17:11

While at the bookshop, Green attracts the attention of the customers who quickly call the attention of the guards. The party spends their time dealing with the guards and convincing them that everything is fine while Cornelius works on opening the doors to the secret chambers of his husband. 1st of Nightal, afternoon.

Daring Dozen 69

Friday, 26 April 2024 17:11

While Swift and Yalda are gone, Woodruff and Cornelius leave Green at the inn and make a stop at the guard station to deal with some bureaucracy. They are alerted to something suspicious going on there and when they enter, are attacked by a Gelatinous Cube and a drow. They manage to escape the drow after Cornelius was temporarily downed and retreat to the tavern where Green is waiting for them. The latter was trying to commune with its patron but went temporarily insane during the attempt. After some difficulty handling Green, they get everything under control but not without attracting attention. Cornelius spends some time deciphering the secret spell and some time during that they receive a note with the message “I miss you” from the Black Spider. They take an early rest. 2nd of Nightal, early morning.

Daring Dozen 70

Friday, 3 May 2024 17:11

The party gets tattoos and after that they reconvene at the bookstore and manage to enter the room underneath the basement. They investigate the mirror and discover that it is a divine tool that sucks people's memories and is made by Shar. Cornelius sacrifices his memories to the memory to gain more power. His only personal memories are some fragments of his husband. This is where they meet Klyde who pops out of the mirror and is immediately followed by a group of Sharran cultists. They defeat them and preserve one of their heads in Yalda's lamp. Their leader and another escape back through the mirror. 2nd of Nightal, midday.

Daring Dozen 71

Friday, 10 May 2024 17:11

They go back to the mirror and try to destroy it but fail. Klyde leads them to another bookstore with a portal, and they attempt to talk themselves into it but fail. Battle ensues. They defeat half of the cultists, but the rest flee since they cannot pass the magic barriers that the party has created. 2nd of Nightal, early evening.

Daring Dozen 72

Friday, 24 May 2024 17:11

The party descends into the Underdark and traverses it aimlessly for a couple days until Klyde catches a break and leads them somewhere promising, somewhere where the stone walls are worked and not just natural caves. 4th of Nightal, morning.

Daring Dozen 73

Friday, 31 May 2024 17:11

The party fights two nabassu who ambush them and continue their travels through the Underdark after they dispatch them. When the party notices a faint tremor that affects the whole cave system surrounding them, they are surprised by a group of five drow who propose a temporary alliance to fend of what is likely an approaching neothelid. Cornelius and the others convince their leader Soloj Claddar to show them an illusion of the temple of Vanrakdoom and to give them a detailed description of the path to the temple. Since Soloj is a warlock, he also shares some resources with Cornelius and Green. 4th of Nightal, midday.

Daring Dozen 74: The Great Worm

Friday, 14 June 2024 17:11

4th of Nightal, midday (2024.6.14)
The party is preparing for the encounter with the neothelid that is slowly but surely approaching their position. As they do so, the following things happen:

Cornelius
- CON saving throw DC 25: Cornelius notices that he is no longer hungry. A failed saving throw will make his progression faster. He may also willingly fail.

Woodruff
- WIS saving throw DC 20: She notices small white, almost translucent veins growing over her body, starting at her waist. If successful, she recognizes these to be foreign to her body. Otherwise, she accepts them as being part of everything here, including her. If they are left to grow, she will start perceiving thoughts not of her own.

The tremors become increasingly stronger and when the worm seems to be very close to them, they suddenly stop. The duergar make stealth check and depending either approach or attack from the hole that seems to have been dug by a purple worm through the ceiling of the cave. Characters with high perception hear very faint thuds some distance from the players. The duergar levitate down while invisible and enlarged.

The Mind Flayers

Zzara'kath is a tall and slender mind flayer with a purple-blue hue to its skin, making it look almost ethereal. Its long, slender tentacles writhe constantly, giving an unsettling air of menace. Its eyes glow with an eerie green light, which often betrays its calculating and cold nature. Driven by an insatiable hunger for knowledge and power, Zzara'kath is the mastermind behind the colossal neothelid. It dresses in flowing, dark robes adorned with arcane symbols. Zzara'kath projects thoughts that are soft but command attention, reflecting its detached superiority. Zzara'kath regards the duergar as useful but expendable tools, valuing their loyalty and endurance but showing no concern for their well-being.

Ulthozz is shorter and bulkier than its counterpart, with dark purple skin that adds to its intimidating presence. Its tentacles are shorter and thicker, twitching with barely contained energy. Its eyes are a deep, unsettling black, reflecting its unpredictable and volatile nature. Ulthozz revels in chaos and destruction, serving as the duo's enforcer. It wears a mix of arcane-infused armor and robes, designed to protect while allowing freedom of movement. Ulthozz's thoughts are booming and filled with manic energy, striking fear into those who receive them. Ulthozz sees the duergar as little more than living shields and instruments of its chaotic desires, enjoying their suffering as much as their utility.

Duergar Slave Warriors

The duergar's leader Druknar Ironmind is stocky and muscular, with a bald head and a thick black beard that frames his stern face. His piercing gray eyes are often downcast, carrying a haunted, faraway look that reveals the weight of his ancestors' torment. His facial expressions are minimal and stoic, rarely showing anything beyond a grim determination. As the leader of the duergar warriors, Druknar exudes a quiet authority, his commands issued with a resigned tone that underscores his deep melancholy. His demeanor is one of quiet endurance, his movements slow and deliberate, reflecting a life of suppressed pain and relentless duty. He views the mind flayers with a mix of fear and resigned obedience, recognizing them as his masters and oppressors.

Thorzal Shadowfist is dark-skinned with a shaved head and a gray beard, adding to his grim appearance. His face is often set in a deep frown, with eyes that seem perpetually shadowed by an inner darkness. A noticeable scar runs down his left cheek, but it's his sorrowful, distant gaze that truly reveals his inner turmoil. Thorzal moves with a heavy, almost sluggish gait, as if the weight of his memories drags him down. He rarely speaks, and when he does, his voice is a low, gravelly murmur that hints at the depth of his despair. His demeanor is somber and introspective, often lost in thought. Thorzal harbors a deep, unspoken resentment towards the mind flayers, but his fear and sense of duty keep him in line.

Borgath Steelvein is short and stout, with a dark gray beard and piercing blue eyes that seem to see through to one's soul. His eyes are often glassy and unfocused, reflecting a deep, unspoken grief. He wears a constant expression of quiet sorrow, with the corners of his mouth turned down as if weighed by perpetual sadness. Borgath's movements are slow and deliberate, his shoulders perpetually hunched as if bearing an invisible burden. When he speaks, his voice carries a tone of melancholy, each word tinged with regret. His demeanor is one of stoic resignation, often lost in thoughts of what once was and what might have been. Borgath views the mind flayers with a sense of fatalistic acceptance, believing that rebellion is futile against such powerful beings.

Kromdul Ironhide is muscular with a braided white beard and tattoos covering his arms, each one a story of battle and survival. His remaining eye is a dull, lifeless gray, often staring off into the distance as if haunted by unseen horrors. His face is frequently set in a scowl, but beneath the anger lies a deep-seated melancholy. Kromdul's behavior is erratic, swinging between aggressive outbursts and moments of silent brooding. He often isolates himself from others, retreating into his own thoughts. His voice, when he speaks, is harsh and filled with a bitterness that hints at long-buried pain. His demeanor is volatile, with an undercurrent of profound sadness that seeps into every action. Kromdul views the mind flayers with a mix of hatred and fear, his aggressive nature barely kept in check by the knowledge of their overwhelming power.

The Drow

Soloj Claddar is a cunning and ambitious drow with striking white hair styled in intricate braids adorned with small spider-shaped charms. His piercing bright red eyes hint at his dark connections, often staring intensely as if listening to unheard whispers. Soloj's face is frequently set in a determined, almost fanatical expression. He commands both fear and respect, with a voice that carries authority and a demeanor that brooks no dissent.

Vellin Abuin is a skilled and ruthless drow with long silver hair usually tied back in a practical yet elegant ponytail. Her rare rose-hued eyes add an unusual and striking feature to her appearance, often narrowing in suspicion or calculation. She prefers to operate in the shadows, her presence almost ghostly as she blends with her surroundings. Vellin's voice is sharp and cutting, often used to relay tactical commands or deliver biting sarcasm. While her exterior is cool and detached, those who know her understand that her loyalty is fierce and unwavering, especially to her comrades.

Filfaere Cormrael is an enchanting and powerful sorceress with dark skin and silver eyes that seem to hold ancient mysteries. Her long, flowing pale blonde hair cascades down her back in soft waves. Filfaere's face often bears a calm expression, masking the fierce determination within. Filfaere's voice is melodic and soothing, often used to chant incantations or offer sage advice. Beneath her tranquil exterior lies a sorceress deeply connected to the arcane energies of the Underdark.

Viedrar Olabban is a formidable drow fighter with a tall and muscular build, his short, neatly kept hair adding to his soldier-like appearance. His most distinctive feature is his prosthetic arm, which shimmers with a faint blue light, hinting at its magical properties. Viedrar's amber eyes are rare and striking, his face usually set in a stoic expression. Viedrar's voice is deep and commanding, used to relay battle tactics or maintain order. Viedrar is deeply loyal to his comrades, his tactical prowess and strength making him a crucial member of the group.

Thalra Sylnar is an agile and perceptive drow with shoulder-length copper hair often tied back into a simple, practical bun. Her bright green eyes often scan the surroundings with a keen gaze. Thalra's face bears a focused expression, reflecting her sharp instincts and exceptional tracking abilities. Thalra's voice is soft and measured, used sparingly to offer guidance or relay information. Beneath her quiet exterior lies a fierce warrior, always ready to protect her companions and strike from the shadows with deadly precision.

Friday, 28 June 2024 17:11

4th of Nightal, midday (2024.6.28)
The party continue to fight the neothelid. They are getting desperate and Klyde casts Forcecage and traps the neothelid, which lashes out and feebleminds Cornelius and Woodruff.

Daring Dozen 76

Friday, 12 July 2024 17:11

4th of Nightal, midday (2024.7.12)

- Timo's new (temporary) character Druknar Ironmind is introduced
- Woodruff is still feebleminded but retains some part of her consciousness with the help of the symbiotic mushroom that has invaded her
- Dimi is conveniently absent this and next session and Cornelius remains feebleminded

After a brief confrontation with Soloj, where they decide to go separate ways, the Daring Dozen loot the bodies and discover that one of the duergar is still alive. Druknar Ironmind joins the party after brief introductions. He explains the situation with the mindflayers, that they are enslaved by them and tells them of their village where there may be someone who could possibly heal Cornelius and Woodruff. Thus, they travel towards the village without much happening at first. They encounter places where the duergar placed runes to remember their dead since they are not allowed to keep their bodies. After a night's rest, they continue to travel and when they prepare for their next night's sleep, they notice rising water levels that are somehow caused by the underground river that they are traveling along. Druknar keeps watch but nods off and when he awakes, the water has already reached him and covers him almost up to his knees. He resists the effect of the strange water and the session ends with him alerting the others. 5th of Nightal, late night

5th of Nightal, late night (2024.7.19)
The party is suspicious of the water, and they try to escape its encroaching by traveling along the river in the hopes of evading it by speed alone. When Klyde casts Fly on himself, he is suddenly attacked by a spout of water that almost knocks him out of the air. They roll initiative and fight 4 large sea demons. There are some tense moments when Klyde and Woodruff are both in danger but they manage to send the demons back to their home plane without incurring any losses. Woodruff however, manages to transform into an eagle using her druid powers and leaves the party, ever drawn by that mysterious entity in her head.

Daring Dozen 78: Duergar & Shrooms

Friday, 26 July 2024 17:11

5th of Nightal, late night (2024.7.26)

- Woodruff encounters the deep dragon who is entirely subsumed by the fungal network. The dragon is typically evil (nature check) and delights in knowledge of distant places. This particular dragon however, entered, voluntarily or not, into a symbiotic relationship with some species of fungus that has shifted the dragon's alignment to neutral. This new creature's goal is to spread as much as possible, even to places outside of the Underdark. Everything the fungal network experiences, the dragon also experiences and benefits from thusly. There are multiple strains of this (nature check) and some are nigh indetectable, and there also seems to be a faint trace of magic within the fungus (arcana check).
- The party need to find a way to get into the duergar village without catching the attention of the illithid – the entrance is by the githyanki grave

Assuming the party takes a long rest after the fight, it is now early morning, 6th of Nightal.

Woodruff speaks to the dragon and enters some kind of symbiotic relationship with it. She agrees to spread the fungus network on the surface so the dragon-fungus symbiote may discover that world too. She manages to rejoin the group just in time to hide with them from the approaching mindflayer patrol. They find themselves in the duergar mines waiting for the patrol to pass.

Mindflayer Influence:
Dark, twisting tendrils of mindflayer influence can be seen throughout the village. Mindflayer guards occasionally patrol the area, their presence a constant reminder of the duergar's enslavement. The villagers move with a wary vigilance, their every action shadowed by the oppressive control of their psionic masters.

The village shaman and healer, Thalgrim is an elderly duergar with a long, braided white beard and piercing gray eyes. He carries a staff adorned with all manner of glowing gems and secretly practices ancient healing arts to aid his people. Under the oppressive rule of the mindflayers, Thalgrim serves as a beacon of hope and resilience, discreetly offering spiritual guidance and healing to those in need.

The village blacksmith, Dargol is a burly duergar with arms like tree trunks and a face perpetually smudged with soot. Forced to craft weapons and armor for the mindflayers, he secretly forges hidden compartments and weak points into his creations to sabotage their efforts.

The chief miner, Morgra is a middle-aged duergar woman with sharp features and a no-nonsense attitude. She oversees the village's mining operations, extracting valuable resources for the mindflayers. Despite the heavy surveillance, Morgra organizes secret escape routes and hidden caches of supplies, preparing for the day they can revolt.

The village scout and hunter, Beldrak is lean and agile, with a knack for moving silently through the tunnels. He's forced to track and capture cave creatures for the mindflayers' experiments. Beldrak secretly gathers intelligence on the mindflayers' movements and weaknesses, sharing his findings with the resistance.

The village brewer, Gritta is a jovial duergar with a round face and a hearty laugh. Her tavern has become a haven for secret meetings among the villagers. She brews a variety of ales and spirits that are the pride of the village, often using her gatherings to spread hope and unity among her oppressed kin.

The village leader, Kragar is a stoic and resolute duergar with a scarred face and piercing blue eyes. Once a proud warrior, he now leads his people under the watchful eyes of the mindflayers. Kragar maintains a facade of compliance while secretly coordinating the village's resistance efforts.

6th of Nightal, midday (2024.8.16)

The party find themselves deep within the mines of the Duergar village waiting for the mindflayer patrol to pass them by.

- Yalda: the mind flayer's soul within the ring is able to cast detect thoughts, dominate monster on Yalda. It can also plane shift the ring to save it from destruction or a similar fate. Its goal is to influence the party to further his goal of immortality, it is careful not to antagonize Yalda, however.
- Cornelius: CON save DC 25: A failed saving throw will make his progression faster. He may also willingly fail. Shar starts to tempt him with more power.
- Green: can make an arcana check DC 20: the fungus seems familiar in its alien nature

While waiting for the mind flayer patrol to leave, Woodruff revives Green who gets incarnated as a human with brown hair and of short stature. He is seemingly of sound mind and remembers nothing while he was "Green". His name is Bridd~s and he used to be a triton scientist who discovered something he should not have deep within the ocean depths.
After another hour has passed, Morgra, the chief miner of the duergar village, picks them up and leads them back to the village. The mind flayers seem to not have noticed anything unusual in the village. They are led to Gritta's tavern where most of them get drunk and Klyde even starts a brawl with Morgra, although he loses.

Sober Cornelius strikes a deal with Thalgrim where the latter promised the Dying Dozen the duergar's aid against the sharrans if they help them against the mind flayers. Eventually the party goes to sleep, many of them drunk. Session ends 6th of Nightal, late evening.

The mind flayer Zzara'kath is a tall and slender mind flayer with a purple-blue hue to its skin, making it look almost ethereal. Its long, slender tentacles writhe constantly, giving an unsettling air of menace. Its eyes glow with an eerie green light, which often betrays its calculating and cold nature. Driven by an insatiable hunger for knowledge and power, Zzara'kath is the mastermind behind the colossal neothelid. It dresses in flowing, dark robes adorned with arcane symbols. Zzara'kath projects thoughts that are soft but command attention, reflecting its detached superiority. Zzara'kath regards the duergar as useful but expendable tools, valuing their loyalty and endurance but showing no concern for their well-being.

QUALITH DOOR LOCKS
Mounted on both sides of every door in the mind flayer colony (areas 9 through 20) is a burnished plate of dark, alien metal embossed with a braille-like form of tactile writing known as Qualith. Mind flayers use their tentacles to read Qualith, which is composed in four-line stanzas indecipherable to other creatures. A creature that touches a Qualith inscription, however, can receive fragmentary insight into the multilayered thoughts contained in it. A non-illithid that wants to understand a Qualith inscription in Seadeeps can make a DC 18 Intelligence check to interpret the inscription. A failed attempt results in a crushing headache and requires the creature to succeed on a DC 11 Wisdom saving throw or develop a random form of short-term madness (see "Madness" in chapter 8 of the Dungeon Master's Guide). A comprehend languages spell provides understanding of the inscription roughly equivalent to what a mind flayer would get from it.
Each door plate is imbued with psionic energy that functions like an arcane lock spell. The Qualith inscription on the plate describes the genuflections a mind flayer must make with its tentacles to open the door. Other creatures with at least four tentacles (such as flumphs) can imitate these motions to bypass the lock, provided they can interpret the inscription. A creature must be within 5 feet of the door to open it in this way. Creatures without the requisite tentacles and knowledge must deal with the lock by more conventional means, such as a knock spell. If magic is unavailable, a locked door can be forced open with a successful DC 30 Strength (Athletics) check. Clever adventurers might discover that a decapitated mind flayer head, animated through an animate dead spell, can be used to access the locks.

Veylar's Scheme: Neverwinter's Rebuilding Efforts
The city of Neverwinter is in a delicate phase of recovery. After years of turmoil—ranging from the eruption of Mount Hotenow to political upheaval—the city is rebuilding its infrastructure and expanding its defenses. This requires vast quantities of lumber, much of which must come from the Neverwinter Wood, the sprawling forest that has long stood as a source of mystery and magic.
The Lord Protector, Dagult Neverember, and his council are grappling with the logistics of balancing the city's needs and the growing unrest from local druids, rangers, and citizens who fear the ecological consequences. The tension is a perfect opportunity for Veylar to insert himself into the heart of Neverwinter's politics.

Veylar's Role and Strategy
Disguised as Veylar Ashbough, a charismatic and "concerned" druid, Veylar presents himself as a mediator who can represent the interests of the forest while helping the city achieve its goals.

1. Step 1: Establish Credibility
   Veylar approaches Neverember's court as a humble yet eloquent figure, supported by a growing number of druids and concerned citizens. He offers solutions that sound practical, like selective logging, magical regrowth, or alternative trade agreements to reduce the burden on the forest. His proposals are just plausible enough to gain the council's attention while subtly entrenching him in their discussions.

Key Ploys:

- Charm and Diplomacy: Veylar appeals to the moral compass of the decision-makers, positioning himself as an ally of "compromise."
- Sabotage Alternative Solutions: He discreetly orchestrates the failure of other sustainable proposals (e.g., sabotaging trade caravans or making selective logging efforts fail via forest creatures under his control).
- Foster Public Unrest: Through proxies, he fans the flames of protests against the logging efforts, creating a need for a "moderate voice"—himself.

2. Step 2: Divide and Weaken
   As Veylar becomes involved in the decision-making process, he sows distrust among the council. He encourages competing factions within the city, such as merchants, nobles, and environmentalists, to turn on one another. Each faction believes they are gaining his favor while unknowingly playing into his larger plan.

Key Ploys:

- Merchant Sabotage: Veylar secretly backs certain merchant guilds, ensuring they get preferential access to the lumber trade. This creates resentment among rival guilds and weakens their unity.
- Rally the Common Folk: Through hired agitators and charm, Veylar positions himself as a hero to the people, using the growing protests to pressure Neverember into granting him greater influence.

3. Step 3: The Hidden Agenda
   While Veylar presents himself as the forest's defender, his true goal is to manipulate Neverwinter into granting him significant control over the Neverwinter Wood. Once he secures this authority, he will slowly transform the forest into a dangerous, enchanted domain under his total rule. He envisions turning the entire forest into a living weapon—a poisoned, magical barrier that keeps Neverwinter under his thumb.

Subtle Moves:

- Planting cursed seeds within the forest that spread toxic flora.
- Using his influence to prevent druids or rangers from opposing his schemes.
- Encouraging over-harvesting in certain areas, creating an "ecological disaster" that only he can fix.

1. First Contact:
   The party encounters Veylar Ashbough during a protest near Neverwinter's gates. He is mediating between city guards and angry locals, presenting himself as a voice of reason. If the party sides with the protesters or shows concern for the forest, Veylar takes an immediate interest in them, offering to hire them to investigate "unsanctioned logging operations" in the woods.

Objective: Investigate and shut down an illegal lumber camp (which Veylar secretly orchestrated).

2. Unraveling the Truth:
   As the party works with Veylar, they notice inconsistencies:
   - The illegal logging camps are oddly well-funded, with signs of sabotage designed to escalate tensions.
   - Veylar seems to have an uncanny understanding of the city's internal politics and future plans.
   - Wildlife in the forest exhibits strange behavior, seemingly targeting certain factions while sparing others.

Objective: The party must uncover Veylar's hidden connections and motivations before he gains further influence.

3. The Turning Point:
   When the party gathers enough evidence or disrupts one of Veylar's schemes, he shifts tactics. He uses his growing public favor to brand the party as instigators of unrest or as enemies of Neverwinter's progress. This forces the party to decide: expose him to the city at great personal risk, or retreat and regroup for a final confrontation.

Potential Outcomes

- If Veylar Wins:
  The dragon solidifies his control over Neverwinter Wood, transforming it into a corrupted haven that gives him immense power. Neverwinter itself becomes a pawn in his greater game, and the region slowly falls under his shadow.
- If the Party Prevails:
  Exposing Veylar destabilizes the city's politics but spares the forest. However, Veylar retreats, plotting revenge and forcing the party to prepare for his inevitable return.

Adjusted Setup: Party Resting in Neverwinter Wood

The party's presence in Neverwinter Wood does not go unnoticed. While resting, they encounter strange happenings in the forest—wild animals behaving aggressively, a sense of unease among the trees, and whispers of a mysterious druid rallying local factions. Veylar Ashbough seizes this opportunity to approach the party directly, leveraging their position to aid his machinations.
He arrives at their camp under the pretense of seeking allies against Neverwinter's reckless logging. Veylar suggests the party investigate a nearby illegal logging camp, positioning himself as their trusted ally while subtly tying them into his broader scheme to destabilize Neverwinter.

Proxy Characters

1. Kelvar Finn (Lumber Guild Representative)

- Appearance: A burly human man with short brown hair and a thick beard. His leather vest is stained with sawdust, and his boots are worn from years in the field.
- Personality: Blunt, pragmatic, and profit-driven, Kelvar views the forest as a resource to exploit. He respects strength and competence but despises delays.
- Goal: Secure as much lumber as possible for the rebuilding of Neverwinter, no matter the cost.

Secretly on Veylar's payroll to exacerbate deforestation efforts.

2. Sylwen Valethra (Disillusioned Druid)

- Appearance: A tall elf with pale green hair braided with flowers, her robes fraying at the edges. Her piercing blue eyes hold a hint of sadness.
- Personality: Idealistic but bitter, Sylwen once sought to protect the wood but has become disillusioned with her druid circle's inability to act. She is now Veylar's unwitting pawn.
- Goal: Protect the forest at all costs, believing Veylar's lies that his methods will save it.

3. Therren Gallows (Mercenary Leader)

- Appearance: A scarred half-orc with braided black hair and a weathered green cloak. His chainmail is dulled but well-maintained.
- Personality: Cold, calculating, and loyal only to coin. He respects Veylar's apparent wisdom and pays little attention to morality.
- Goal: Carry out Veylar's orders to harass Neverwinter's logging crews and create chaos, all under the guise of protecting the forest.

Neverwinter Council NPCs

1. Lord Dagult Neverember (Ruler of Neverwinter)

- Appearance: A middle-aged human with neatly groomed black hair, a sharp goatee, and an air of authority. He wears fine blue and gold robes befitting his station.
- Personality: Charismatic and pragmatic, Neverember balances the demands of his city with his ambitions for dominance.
- Goal: Rebuild Neverwinter as the most powerful city in the North, using the forest's resources to achieve it.

2. Lady Mariel Thornton (Councilor of Commerce)

- Appearance: A graceful human woman with chestnut hair tied into a bun and a practical yet elegant green gown.
- Personality: Intelligent and decisive but swayed by economic arguments. She is skeptical of druidic concerns but values order above all else.
- Goal: Ensure the prosperity of Neverwinter's trade routes while avoiding civil unrest.

3. Darlan Greaves (Commander of the City Guard)

- Appearance: A rugged dwarf with gray-streaked hair and a braided beard, clad in polished armor. He carries a longsword engraved with the Neverwinter crest.
- Personality: Loyal and disciplined, Darlan is a staunch defender of Neverember's rule and wary of outsiders.
- Goal: Protect the city from threats, though he is frustrated by the protests and growing tensions over logging.

4. Cedric Thornton (Councilor of Civic Affairs)

- Appearance: A pudgy human with thinning blond hair and a perpetually sweaty face, dressed in overly fine robes for his stature.
- Personality: Nervous and indecisive, Cedric is easily influenced by those who offer him reassurances or flattery.
- Goal: Avoid controversy or responsibility, often acting as a swing vote in council decisions.

5. Revyn Dawnshade (Archdruid, Voice of the Forest)

- Appearance: An ancient elf with silver hair, clad in robes of bark and leaves. Her eyes gleam with the wisdom of centuries, though her movements are slow and deliberate.
- Personality: Calm and measured but increasingly wearied by Neverwinter's encroachment on the forest.
- Goal: Protect the Neverwinter Wood but seeks a peaceful resolution to the conflict. She suspects Veylar but lacks proof of his duplicity.

Encounter: Veylar Ashbough's First Meeting with the Party

Setting:

The party is resting in a serene clearing deep within Neverwinter Wood. The canopy overhead filters sunlight into a patchwork of gold and green, but an eerie silence blankets the area. Unseen eyes watch from the shadows as the party goes about their day.

Introduction of Veylar Ashbough
The first sign of Veylar's approach is a faint rustling in the trees. A soft voice calls out, calm and nonthreatening:
"Travelers, I mean you no harm. May I step into the light?"
Moments later, a tall human man emerges from the foliage. His robes are forest-green, and a silver oak-leaf pendant hangs at his chest. His emerald eyes gleam with a mix of warmth and intelligence. A friendly smile spreads across his face as he raises his hands in a gesture of peace.
Veylar's Dialogue:
"Forgive my intrusion. It is rare to find kindred spirits in these woods, especially ones who seem so... capable. I am Veylar Ashbough, a humble servant of the forest."

The Offer
Veylar opens with pleasantries, expressing admiration for the party's apparent strength and initiative. He quickly pivots to the conflict between Neverwinter and the forest, presenting himself as a mediator seeking balance between the city's expansion and the forest's preservation.
Key Points Veylar Makes:

- On Logging: "Neverwinter's ambitions grow unchecked, and the woods pay the price. Creatures grow restless, ancient spirits are disturbed, and yet the city sees only timber and coin."
- On His Role: "I have worked tirelessly to broker a compromise—limited logging, replanting efforts—but greed clouds their judgment. I fear this balance may shatter without... outside intervention."
- The Mission: Veylar claims that an illegal logging camp is operating deep in the woods, taking more than even Neverwinter's officials have sanctioned. He requests the party's help in shutting it down, saying, "A show of force will send a message that these lands are not unguarded."

Clues to His True Nature
Though Veylar's charm and eloquence make him convincing, perceptive characters may notice subtle inconsistencies:

1. Animal Reactions: The party's mounts or nearby forest creatures may act unnerved by his presence. A successful Insight (DC 15) reveals a sense of unease in the wildlife.
2. Strange Coincidences: If asked about the illegal logging camp, his answers seem rehearsed, and his knowledge of specific details might feel too precise for someone who claims to "just have heard rumors."
3. Arcane Energy: A character who casts Detect Magic will notice faint enchantment magic emanating from Veylar's pendant, which he claims is "a druidic heirloom."

What Happens Next?
If the party accepts his request:

- Veylar gives them directions to a small logging operation. The site is indeed illicit, but it has been set up by Veylar himself through proxies like Therren Hallowbranch to escalate tensions.
- Veylar secretly sends a group of his mercenaries to watch the party, ensuring they complete the task but also gauging their strength.
- He praises their efforts afterward, deepening his "ally" persona while subtly planting seeds of mistrust about Neverwinter's leadership.

If the party is suspicious or refuses:

- Veylar feigns disappointment but remains cordial, saying, "I understand. These matters are not for everyone." He disappears into the woods, but they will later encounter signs of his interference, such as wildlife acting strangely or villagers blaming the party for forest troubles.

Combat Alternative

If the party becomes overtly hostile or confronts him about inconsistencies, Veylar maintains his calm facade but warns them:
“I had hoped you were wiser. The forest does not forgive betrayal lightly.”

- Veylar will attempt to avoid combat directly, using Charm Person or Suggestion to defuse tension.
- If forced to fight, he summons nearby forest creatures to distract the party and escapes into the woods, vowing they will regret crossing him.

Summary:
We bought some new magic items. Nothing major, but Klyde got a weapon upgrade, Swift got a Censer of Controlling Air Elementals and we bought something to protect the whole group from surprise rounds. We also got some additional smaller things, but nothing crazy. We also still have a bunch of Gold left.
Then we went to a meeting of underground information network people and we held a speech about those awful upper class people and their terrible deeds explaining the situation and that they should spread the information. We cast Mass Suggestion on 8 people and it worked on 4 of them.
Then we had time left in the day and teleported to the location where the fungal infection is happening thinking to investigate what's going on there and return to the city the next day for the second day of creating civil unrest. We missed the mark by a few miles on the teleport and were falling from the sky. Feather Fall gave us time to decide what to do and Woodruff and Swift (thanks to Polymorph) turned into giant eagles and carried the rest of us to the target location, avoiding half a day of travel through the forest by one hour of flight time. At the target location we located a clearing that we landed on. On that clearing Woodruff reached out using her fungal feelers to see if she can locate this other fungal network. She could and reached out to it. Only to be slapped by 37 damage as it lashed out at her immediately. She was however able to tell that the source (or should we say part of the source) was attached to the roots of some trees in the middle of this clearing. Analyzing those trees together with the help of Bridds they soon realized that what looked like trees were not trees at all. But instead something else, with a different biological make up and also very much moving, pretending to be trees. During this realization Swift became more and more aware that this entire place didn't feel quite "right". Things at the edge of the clearing seemed to move ever so slightly in the corner of their vision.
Bridds, being very curious about this strange creature in front of them and having seen Woodruff reach out to its consciousness attempted then to also reach out to this being with his own telepathic capability and succeeded. This caused things to escalate. The floor began to move almost as though there was a layer of water beneath the grass. And when Bridd~s attempted to ask this being a question it lashed out physically, as an enormous Vine-like tentacles burst out from the ground and slapped Bridd~s with some bludgeoning and necrotic damage twice. We are now at the start of the combat encounter, with the first enemy having made its attacks on Bridds.

As Bridd~s reels from the first strike, the clearing shifts. The false trees no longer pretend. Their bark splits into fleshy ridges, limbs unfurl into jagged, root-wrapped claws, and a massive form—the true center of the network—rises from the earth. A violet-hued horror of rotting bark, tangled limbs, and twitching body parts, made up of all manner of creatures.
Suddenly, Woodruff stiffens mid-step. Her eyes glaze over, pupils swallowed by a pale violet shimmer. Vines surge from the soil at her feet, wrapping around her legs and yanking her into the writhing mass of the hivemind. Cornelius lets out a choked sound as something tendril-thin and sharp lashes around his ankle, pulling him from the edge of the glade with unnatural speed. Yalda tries to cry out, but her voice is swallowed by a choking wave of spores as she too is pulled under, her limbs locking up mid-resistance.
The hivemind absorbs them, folding their bodies into its twitching bulk. You see their forms inside it—barely visible beneath shifting layers of violet flesh and necrotic bark. Their eyes move. Their chests rise. They're alive… but bound. Restrained. Soon to be part of the network.
And the clearing is no longer still. Three more necrohulks rise, stepping forward in unison as the air ripples with the same pulsing rhythm that echoes from within the hivemind.
Initiative continues—with three of your own now trapped inside the enemy.

Summary:
The party fights the hivemind and the hulks and fairly quickly everyone but Swift is subdued and grafted to the hulks. In a feat of desperation, Swift manages to inflicht sufficient damage to the hivemind for it to expell Cornelius, Woodruff, and Yalda who immediately join the fight and heal their companions. The fight is not as desperate anymore and seems manageable though difficult. They are now trapped within the clearing that is now dim light.

Loose Threads:
- Woodruff: Pass DC 22(or higher) to maintain concentration for Draconic Transformation, currently in Chalice configuration, roll d6 and get 2 to still only take half damage
- Yalda is grafted to hivemind
- The hivemind used 3/5 Legendary Resistances, and does not have the Spore Bomb Back

Attending Players:
- Dimi as Cornelius
- Jam as Bridds
- Mahmoud as Klyde

Absent Players:
- Alyona as Woodruff
- Hasti as Yalda
- Polina as Swift

Summary:
Woodruff loses her concentration and her draconic transformation vanishes. The party struggled against the hivemind and while they subdued it with the help of Onyx, Bridds was grafted into a hulk, his body destroyed. They only found the remnants of Bridds's finger preserved inside a glass vial. They harvest unique parts of the hivemind for evidence and take a long rest inside a Tiny Hut. While they were sleeping, the trees moved around the hut and when they wake up they found themselves encircled. Woodruff communicated with them via the Speak with Plants spell and found out that they were fighting against Onyx's influence. They rolled CON saves and Woodruff, Klyde, and Swift failed, the spores taking root inside their lungs just before they teleport in front of the city gates of Neverwinter.

Dramatis Personae:
- Onyx

Loose Threads:
- What are the consequences for Onyx interfering and aiding the party?
- What are the consequences of them inhaling the spores?
- The second network was a malignant mutation of Onyx's original network but Woodruff does not quite understand that

Attending Players:
- Alyona as Woodruff
- Dimi as Cornelius
- Jam as Bridds
- Mahmoud as Klyde

Absent Players:
- Polina as Swift
- Hasti as Yalda

Summary:
The party returns to Neverwinter and Cedric's mansion where they show Cedric the evidence they gathered and relate what they have seen there. Cedric is convinced and will try to talk to his sister Halia Thornton. Before that, Woodruff cures herself, Klyde, and Swift from the affliction caused by the fungal spores using Greater Restoration. This also erases the memory that Veylar implanted into her mind. She mentions this to him when they talk to Cedric and he restores the memory according to her wishes.
Bridds is restored to life as a triton with only his finger and pain in the chest retaining evidence of any outside influence. He faces an existential crisis when he realizes that he is not entirely free. Though he has a clear mind, he seems to forget knowledge related to his studies of nature. Bridds discovers that the sword "given" to him by a solar is an ancient, sentient weapon named Thalamun.
They also talked to Darlan Greaves, commander of the guard, and convince him that he should not send more soldiers to a senseless death in the forest. He will try to talk to Dagult Neverember and convince him to stop sending people there.
Veylar and "Ceddi", Cedric's clone, will meanwhile try to talk to Halia Thornton.

Summary:
They arrive at the Sleeping Giant Inn to sleep. A new guest character Bergamont was introduced who is an assassin looking for Swift for unknown reasons. They were looking for pliers to use them to pull out Swift's teeth with them. She convinced Bridds to take him up to their room when everyone else except for Veylar was also having drinks and talks downstairs. Yalda told Swift and the drunk Woodruff about her commune where she tried to contact the source of her power and was looking for answers to her longing and questions. Unfortunately, she got noticed by something else that tried to control her instead. She resisted the foreign power in the end. After this, the lantern started to change and Yalda's origin poem started to appear on it.
Upstairs, Bridds and Bergamont encountered Veylar who promptply cast the Dominate spell on the stranger because she seemed suspicious. After some tense discussion, everyone relaxed and tried to talk this out which is when they were attacked by a drow who first shot a crossbow bolt through the window to hit Swift and then crashed into the room to attack them. After he was defenestrated by Klyde, the party, notably Bridds, Klyde, and Yalda, pursused him out into the street.

Summary:
Yalda, Klyde, and Bridds engaged with the drow when they were ambushed by 4 other drow who were hiding behind a cover of magical darkness. Woodruff dispelled the darkness by a powerful spell and made them easier targets for the group who killed the initial attacker who is trying to escape. They managed to bring down Yalda and picked Bridds as their next target. Unfortunately for the enemy, Bridds is immune to their necrotic blades. This discouraged them and they fled but not before Bridds sicced a ghost on them who is able to track them for an hour. Bridds tracked them to a run-down building where they seem to recover from their wounds. Bridds remembers this location. After this night the party rested and when they woke up, Klyde and Veylar were gone. They tracked them down in the Shard of the Moon where they witnessed a much weakened Veylar being treated by Varos with the assistance of Klyde. Veylar told them that he was slowly dying while he was essentially holding back the influence of this infecting power which has been trying to get into this world for over a hundred years but has increased its efforts during the last year or so.
Swift is now also chased by the Tea Party.

They then decided to locate the Black Spider to collect their reward but were unable to find him in his lair. He still left them 4000 gold and considered the debt settled because of the costs incurred. Since Klyde and Yalda also entered the Wave Echo Cave, they got a free feat from the magic-infused atmosphere. After they got a letter of recommentation from Varos, they teleported to Waterdeep to talk to a priest of Selune there who informed them that the city of Waterdeep is besieged by storm and undead. This is where they met Ithrelle who is also on a quest to banish the Nightwalker. The four make their way to the northern city walls where they hope to find more information and maybe help the soldiers. On their way, they get enveloped by magical mist and initiate combat against a vampire who has been stalking them using animals. They fight it and after some struggle manage to wound it, after which Yalda threatens her which gives the vampire pause.

Summary:
The party prepares for the mission in the Mere of Dead Men. They are provided 3 elite soldiers, some basic supplies and a phial blessed by Selune herself. Since Cornelius is out of spell slots, they decide to rest for the day and start their mission the next morning. Yalda prays to Talos and has a vision of returning home to the sunken city beyond the coast. While the party discuss their plans, they notice people entering the general's headquarters and among them a woman who is inclined to flirt with Yalda. The woman introduces herself as Adria and after some flirting she invites Yalda on a walk. Swift is asked by Cornelous to follow and observe them. After Swift is satisfied that everything is safe, she returns to the party. After a while, Yalda is invited to Adria's townhouse and when there she tries to charm Yalda magically but when that fails she attacks Yalda and thereby reveals her vampire form. Yalda is barely able to fight off the vampire, but the rest of the party is surrounded by ten other vampires and attacked. Since Swift pulled out the Tear of Selune, the vampires make devastating use of their Command ability and manage to overwhelm the party. Yalda is still minutes away from them.

Dramatis Personae:
- Ser Caldrin Veyr: A broad-shouldered human in his late 40s with close-cropped salt-and-pepper hair and a scar running from his temple to his jaw. His plate armor is well-maintained but shows dents and repairs from years of use. Backstory: Once a decorated officer of a border legion, Caldrin resigned after a disastrous campaign where politics cost him half his men. Now he sells his expertise only to causes he deems worthy, drilling allies into disciplined units and leading from the front.
- Nyssa Kael: A wiry half-elf woman with pale skin, cropped black hair, and quick, restless eyes. She favors dark leather and keeps her weapons minimal and practical. Backstory: Taken in young by a thieves' guild, Nyssa learned silence and patience as survival. She broke from her guild after a betrayal and now works on her own terms. She prefers contracts where her skills can dismantle corrupt leaders rather than serve them.
- Orven Dhal: A gaunt tiefling with crimson skin, curling horns polished to a shine, and ink-stained hands. His robes are patched with fire-scorched holes, and he carries a staff marked with etched runes. Backstory: Orven was once a scholar at an arcane college, expelled after a forbidden experiment nearly destroyed part of the campus and permanently damaged his lungs, rendering him mute. He has since embraced the battlefield as his laboratory, honing destructive magic with ruthless precision.

Glasstaff

Tuesday, 29 April 2025 20:25

Wizard, leader of the Redbrands in Phandalin, serving the Black Spider. Was killed by a Death Tyrant while fighting against it with the Daring Dozen.

Black Spider

Tuesday, 29 April 2025 20:31

Nezznar, drow arachnomancer, and leader of the base located in the Wave Echo Caves. Crime lord.

Alias: Soloj Claddar

He's a cunning and ambitious drow with striking white hair styled in intricate braids adorned with small spider-shaped charms. His piercing bright red eyes hint at his dark connections, often staring intensely as if listening to unheard whispers. Soloj's face is frequently set in a determined, almost fanatical expression. He commands both fear and respect, with a voice that carries authority and a demeanor that brooks no dissent.

With Wave Echo Cave under his command, Nezznar turned his attention deeper—not to defend what he had gained, but to expand it. The Forge of Spells provided tools and security, but he was searching for something greater: power not born of the Weave, but of the mind and the void between worlds.
Through illithid records and drow informants, Nezznar uncovered accounts of Zzara'kath, a renegade mind flayer who had broken from its elder brain and pursued immortality by creating a colossal neothelid. Hidden deep within the Underdark, Zzara'kath's work had remained untouched for decades—buried in the ruins of Nhalindaur, a place twisted by psionic residue and long-forgotten experiments. To Nezznar, it was exactly what he was looking for: knowledge unclaimed, and a path no one else dared walk.
He launched an expedition from Wave Echo Cave with a handpicked team of drow, seeking the ruin's heart. There, he found Zzara'kath still alive, its mind focused, its creation complete. The encounter escalated into a brutal confrontation—one that Nezznar could not win alone.
He encountered the adventuring party in the depths and, under the alias Soloj Claddar, fought alongside them against both Zzara'kath and the neothelid. The battle was won, but at a cost: Nezznar lost all but one of his drow companions. He vanished before the others could question him. With Cornelius's memories erased and the rest unaware of his true identity, the Black Spider identity remains uncovered.
Now returned to Wave Echo Cave, Nezznar possesses fragments of Zzara'kath's work and firsthand experience of what nearly consumed them all. And though Zzara'kath is gone, its ambition lives on—refined, repurposed, and in Nezznar's hands.

Varos

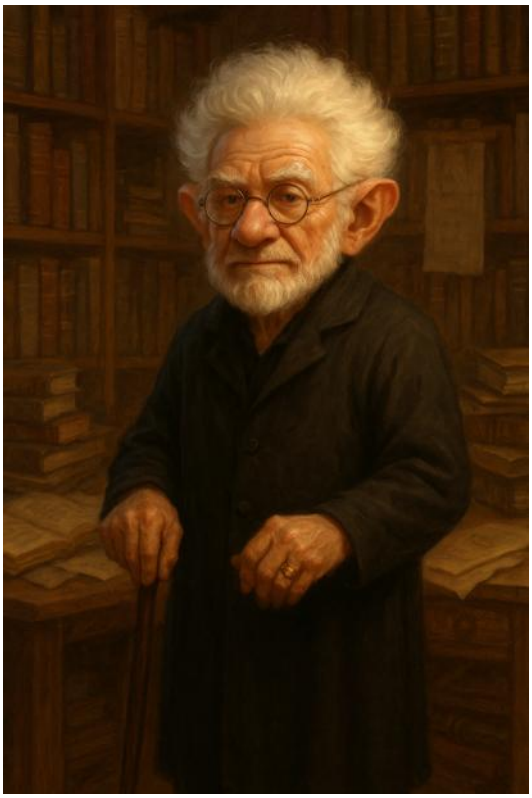

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 01:50

Archpriest of the Shard of the Moon
Race: Silver Dragonborn
Gender: Male
Orientation: Gay
Affiliation: Shard of the Moon, Church of Selûne
Location: Neverwinter
Overview:
Varos is the Archpriest of the Shard of the Moon, the primary temple of Selûne in Neverwinter. Revered for his wisdom, compassion, and steady leadership, Varos is a key religious figure in the city. He serves not only as a priest but also as a counselor, diplomat, and quiet political actor within Neverwinter's shifting power dynamics.
Personality:
Varos is calm, introspective, and deeply devoted to Selûne's ideals of balance, guidance, and mystery. He listens more than he speaks, and when he does speak, it's with deliberate clarity. His demeanor is gentle but firm—he's hard to provoke and impossible to intimidate. Varos is known for his empathetic nature and his ability to make others feel seen without judgment.
Role in the Campaign:
Varos has become a trusted ally to the adventuring party known as the Daring Dozen. He is currently mentoring Klyde, one of the party members, in the ways of Selûne. As the leader of the Shard of the Moon, he also serves as the party's most prominent contact within Neverwinter's religious circles, offering guidance and resources when needed.
Background:
Much of Varos's past remains unspoken, though it's clear he has seen both hardship and revelation. His rise to Archpriest was not without struggle, and his status as a Dragonborn in a human-majority city has only strengthened his advocacy for inclusion and spiritual dignity for all.
Notable Traits:

- Sees omens in the stars and moonlight
- Believes in redemption and second chances
- Maintains a strong yet peaceful presence in political and religious affairs
- Has a keen awareness of divine and arcane phenomena

Cornelius

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:01

Cornelius Britz IX was born in Loudwater where he lived until his 30s. At a young age he did not take much interest into crafting or trading which was the main business of his family. Instead, he enjoyed studying so he moved to Waterdeep.

He quickly fell in love with the city and started working at a library where he met his companion, Lenuryll Naeleth, an elf who had a similar fascination with books. Lenu was already 300 years old and so he was far more experienced than Cornelius. They worked together for a few years and eventually became romantically involved.

After a couple of years, they opened their own bookstore in Waterdeep, spending most of their time reading books and using their profits to bring in even more books.

They had lived together for 411 years until Lenu eventually passed away from old age. Cornelius continued running the shop until he started noticing he was forgetting things and realized his condition was getting worse. He researched a cure for his conditions but could not find anything concrete save for people who might be holding answers or could use spells.

Over the years, he studied and trained in the arcane with his partner since he was a wizard, but never really got invested in it until he saw that this might the only way for him to stop his condition from deteriorating.

His magic focus is a gold ring which was given to him by Lenu.

His biggest fear is that he will eventually forget Lenu and would do absolutely anything to avoid that because he believes nothing can be more important than a 411-year love story.

He holds himself fairly well considering his age. He has a cane made of dark wood (which I'd like to use as his quarterstaff), wears reading glasses (the ones for reading up close), and simple black clothes. His hair is white and puffy but don't let his appearance fool you.

He can be a spiteful old man when his little rituals are disturbed or when it is obvious to him that he's right about something and it's not going his way. He can be quick to repay a favor but may wait for months or even year to get revenge on even the smallest of wrongdoings.

Lenuryll Naeleth

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:03

Cornelius's late husband. A high elf who died under mysterious circumstances and whose death caused Cornelius's memory problems.

He was secretly studying the very rare and deadly plant Shadowthorn that can only be found in the Shadowfell. After centuries of research in secret, there were hints of the plant being a key to prolonged life, maybe even immortality. While working on an elixir to extend his life, Lenu drew the attention of the Nightwalker and was lured into the Shadowfell and finally trapped in the Negative Plane.

Dagult Neverember

Lord Dagult Neverember (Ruler of Neverwinter, member of the Neverwinter Council)

- Setting: Seated at the head of the grand council chamber, his polished armor and regal navy robes gleam under the candlelight. His expression remains impassive, calculating every argument for political and financial advantage.
- Approach: Neverember values economic growth and stability above all else. The party must propose an economically sound alternative to deforestation that either increases revenue or secures Neverwinter's expansion.
- Challenges: If the proposal weakens trade, tax revenue, or city control, he will dismiss it outright.
- Tactics Against Him: Frame their proposal as an opportunity to monopolize enchanted lumber or control valuable trade routes. Suggest new logging areas that benefit his political allies.
- What Fails: Pure moral arguments—he needs financial or strategic incentives.

Mariel Thornton

Mariel Thornton (Councilor of Commerce, member of the Neverwinter Council)

- Setting: A meticulous woman in a sharp green gown, she glances through trade reports while listening, tapping her quill impatiently.
- Approach: As the head of commerce, she only cares about supply chains, merchant interests, and trade expansion. The party must present a sustainable yet profitable logging strategy to gain her favor.
- Challenges: She distrusts druidic interference and is skeptical of long-term environmental concerns.
- Tactics Against Her: Offer new trade deals, magical reforestation solutions, or present aristocrats who support sustainable logging for status and market control.
- What Fails: Emotional appeals—she requires clear financial advantages.

Darlan Greaves

Sir Darlan Greaves (Commander of the City Guard, member of the Neverwinter Council)

- Setting: A gruff, battle-scarred dwarf in full plate armor, arms crossed as he listens with a skeptical frown.
- Approach: He cares about Neverwinter's security and stability, not logging itself. However, if shifting logging operations reduces banditry, smuggling, or external threats, he'll support it.
- Challenges: If the party's plan weakens the city's hold on strategic resources, he will oppose it.
- Tactics Against Him: Frame the logging issue as a security concern—claim that deforestation exposes Neverwinter's borders to raiders or saboteurs.
- What Fails: Environmentalist rhetoric—he only listens to law and order arguments.

Cedric Thornton

Cedric Thornton (Councilor of Civic Affairs, member of the Neverwinter Council)

- Setting: A pudgy, nervous man in fine but slightly disheveled robes, dabbing sweat from his forehead.
- Approach: He avoids controversy and will side with whoever pressures him most. Public opinion and noble influence dictate his decisions.
- Challenges: He is easily manipulated by more assertive council members.
- Tactics Against Him: Have influential nobles, clergy, or powerful merchants advocate for sustainability. Convince him that shifting logging will reduce civic unrest and make him look good.
- What Fails: Logical arguments—he cares more about public approval than facts.

Revyn Dawnshade

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:13

Revyn Dawnshade (Archdruid, Voice of the Forest, member of the Neverwinter Council)

- Setting: Standing rather than sitting, her druidic robes blend with natural green hues.
- Approach: She fully supports the party's proposal but lacks political leverage to push it through alone.
- Challenges: The rest of the council views her as biased and too radical.
- Tactics With Her: Reinforce her stance with arcane experts, divine leaders, or hard evidence. Expose Veylar's true manipulations if uncovered.

What Fails: Relying solely on her influence—she needs external political pressure to succeed.

Veylar

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:30

The ancient green dragon Veylarkhantaross who, under the guise of the high elf Veylar Ashbough, seeks to control the Neverwinter wood and the city of Neverwinter. He has successfully convinced Woodruff and the others that he is a protector of the forest and wants to protect it from the deforestation that is being undertaken by Lord Dagult Neverember and his city council. He even cast Modify Memory on Woodruff to convince her that he is her mentor whom she forgot about due to the Nightwalker's influence.

Ogron

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:51

Goliath soldier who pretended to flirt with Cornelius to meet with the party to tell them more about the dying soldiers in the Neverwinter Wood. The party tasked him with gathering the names of all the soldiers who died to talk to their families.

Captain Harrows

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:51

Captain of the palace guard and direct subordinate of Sir Darlan Greaves, and boss of Ogron.

Captain Harrows is a female wood elf with a lean, weathered build and the quiet confidence of someone who's spent decades in command. Her features are sharp and angular, framed by dark, tightly bound hair streaked with silver. Her eyes—pale green with a hint of gold—miss little, always watchful but rarely intrusive. She wears her uniform with precision but no vanity, favoring plain leathers and a well-maintained cloak over showier attire.
Though friendly, Harrows keeps people at arm's length. Her words are measured, her tone calm, and she listens more than she speaks. Years of dealing with politics, unrest, and hidden threats in Neverwinter have made her cautious but not cold. She respects competence, dislikes theatrics, and prefers honest effort to grand gestures. Beneath her reserve lies a deep sense of duty—not just to her city, but to the people under her protection.

Thalgrim

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:56

Spiritual leader of Grimhold village and priest of Selûne. Was once mentor and romantic partner of Varos. Extremely old duergar who likes to pretend to be senile.

Woodruff

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:00

Woodruff Galium Odoratum is from a small druid village hidden in the middle of the forest, so I think it would make sense for her to be a forest elf. Their community is very secluded and not welcoming towards outsiders, but they take care of the travelers that need help from time to time. Basically, they're guardians of the forest. But my character always had a curious and persistent nature, so she was always interested in the world outside and couldn't understand why their community had to be so closed off.

So one time she meets a group of people in the forest that are clearly in need of help - they're a group of martial art disciples led by the master of their sect/order (so basically they're monk class is what I mean). Their sect was suddenly attacked and she (the sect leader) was forced to flee with as many disciples as she could save.

So despite the elders of the village being dissatisfied with that decision, the group is given shelter and treatment. My character takes care of them, and after a long time of talking, training and spending time together, she finds a true soulmate in the sect leader and they fall in love. My character wants to leave together with her and become part of the sect, but then suddenly the village is also attacked and destroyed.

The elders are furious with my character for bringing doom to the village, and in the midst of the chaos, as a punishment, they curse her so that she forgets all about her soulmate. So my character wakes up, finds her home destroyed, and has no memory whatsoever of what happened to it. She does have a strong feeling, though, that she's forgotten something or someone very important. She also has some kind of object that she knows is connected to what she's forgotten (for example, a pendant or something like that, which was actually a meaningful gift from the sect leader)

So now she is on a quest to find the truth of it all, and her lost memories.

That's the baseline of the story, but there are still a lot of holes that could be filled differently, depending on what might be useful for the story later in the campaign. For example, what happened to the sect? Why and by whom were they attacked in the first place? Maybe they had some precious object or knowledge that the others were after (and maybe that's connected to the object that the sect leader gifted to my character?)

I don't think the sect leader was evil or meant harm to my character because they truly were soulmates striving to do good and help others. More likely, the sect got caught up in something by trying to help. Maybe some of the events were a part of some bigger scheme.

Yalda

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:01

Yalda Quenya Ara was born on Mintarn off the coast of Waterdeep. She was visited upon in her womb by an unknown entity which granted her immense powers but cut short her mother's life during childbirth. She has been having visions and is drawn by a mysterious urge. The more her powers grow, the more lightning-like tattoos spread across her arms and body.

Swift

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:02

Swift is a changeling who has left their parents to be free from their overly restrictive and controlling views on the art of thievery. They have developed a reputation throughout the whole of the Sword Coast using various personas that have a bounty on their head in many cities. One such wanted persona is Vostrix the Shadowscale, a red dragonborn.

Klyde

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:03

Klyde is the kidnapped and brainwashed son of a drow priestess of Selûne. He was raised in a temple of Shar led by Keresta Delvingstone located deep within the Underdark.

Klyde is a 21-year-old male drow with white, with unkempt hair that just reaches his brow, shadowing his red eyes. His dark gray skin bears faint traces of ritualistic scarring along his forearms—remnants of the cruel conditioning inflicted on him by the cult of Shar. Though lean in build, there's a coiled strength in his posture, like someone who's always prepared to strike or flee. His movements are quiet, deliberate, shaped by years of survival and control.

He wears muted, practical clothing—dark leathers and cloth well-suited for both stealth and battle—accented only by a single item: a silver locket that hangs from a thin chain around his neck. The locket is plain on the outside, but inside it holds a small drawing of his mother, a priestess of Selûne, and the last tie to the life that was stolen from him. Klyde uses the locket to cast his signature Darkness spell, drawing both magic and resolve from it.

Her carries two hammers strapped to his shoulder, carefully secured for quick access. Their worn grips and dark metal heads suggest frequent, brutal use. Klyde doesn't carry himself like a traditional warlock—he blends martial readiness with the quiet menace of shadow-touched magic. His patron is the Raven Queen, and her influence shows more in his stoicism, grim focus, and quiet defiance than in outward symbols.

Despite his age, Klyde speaks rarely and with weight. He has little patience for distraction, especially when matters of vengeance or faith arise. Having escaped the indoctrination of Shar's temple, he now walks a path shaped by wrath, restraint, and buried grief, always one step removed from others, yet unwilling to let go of the hope that Selûne's light still remembers him.

Green (Bridd~s, Bridds)

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:06

Day 1 What a bother. Today was my last day before they ship me off to research base C. Who'd have thought they'd ever need someone from my field as an on-site researcher. Not me. I'd want nothing more than to stay. What was the point of changing my major if they were just gonna hold my funding hostage and send me down there anyway? They say it's nowhere near as bad as it used to be. Supposedly mages laid tracks of luminescence, so you'd barely be in full darkness. And they swear up and down you get used to the cold down there. Will barely feel it. I imagine it quite difficult to feel anything regardless of the amount of time you are subjected to an environment of pitch black ice water. Gotta pack now. Time is running out. I need sleep while I can still get it. I wonder if they will let me bring my bed.

Day 2 Terrible. Everything is terrible. We left bright and early. They took me and a few other poor sods to the Hq of the "Realm Edge Militia Foundation" for a briefing. I think I made a joke about underwear. No one laughed. If I hadn't known any better, I would have thought some of them were excited. But who could be excited about this? We couldn't just swim down here. Something to do with the pressure. Instead, they crammed each of us into an exoskeleton they called "Aether-Driven Acute Pressure Tangent" or "A.D.A.P.T." for short. Someone must have been real proud to come up with that one. The cute wordplay naturally being nothing but a diversion from the archaic crudeness of the actual device. Had I named it people would know what to expect. "F.U.C.C." "Form fit Uncomfortable Copper Coffin" When I tell you now, that I was dangling in a metal tube, attached to a rope, barely able to move, with pure darkness above, below and around me, my greatest worry is that my words will never have the detail and force to accurately convey the sheer terror that cradled me in its boney embrace for 43 minute and 32 second duration of that descend. But good news! Due to the gracious and capable foresight of the project administration the sleeping chambers have been reinforced through ley line knotting. Meaning we won't have to wear our F.U.C.C.s to sleep. Just any other time. Tomorrow, they'll bring me to the subject of our study. 532 feet further down. Kill me now.

Day 3 It's incredible. I've sat here in my cramped sleeping chamber, lurched over this notebook like a madman for hours. I can't even begin to accurately describe what I've seen. Incredible. Yes, that is the only word that comes to mind. Were I to truly speak my mind on the matter I would certainly lose my credibility. So then, I will instead attempt--to the best of my ability--to describe what is down there, filtered to protect me from becoming utterly "in-credible".

We went down the additional 500 or so feet. I barely still remember the descent. At the bottom we were led into a small cave that had opened up a few months prior. Squeezing through the passage in our exoskeletons was laborious but feasible until it opened into an enormous cavern below. I would not fathom an attempt at guessing even the approximate size of the entire space. A perimeter ring of aetherlights had been installed at a radius of 300 feet around the entrance we had squeezed through and were now floating around. 600 feet of unwavering aetherlights and we were a tiny star, a blip in the vast icy black. I remember vomiting. The descent into the cavern took another 2 hours. Occasionally strange fish, the likes of which I had never seen would peel themselves out of the thick dark, likely to investigate the metal clad invaders of their home, only to drift on passively soon after. Shortly before we reached the bottom our guide halted our descent. We were to remain at that altitude and observe without getting closer to the ground. We watched him clack a lure light, observed its illuminating descent and recoiled at the revelation of what we had been moving toward. It came to rest a good 12 feet down on shuddering, twitching and constantly undulating flesh. Tentacles curled within cartilage casings, surrounded by fins and indefinable limbs, dragging and jolting along walls of carapace and membrane. The amount of interlacing, fusing and gripping appendages and growths filled the entire circle of light, tainted by the lure lights characteristic icy blue. I felt as though just beyond its protective glow movement stirred but was torn away when the guide clacked a second lure light and shot this one away from us. It soared in ark, illuminating something large above us, only to let it disappear again as it passed the zenith of its trajectory. The guide had assured us that none of the denizens encountered during previous exhibitions had been deemed hazardous but the thought of the pale beast floating above us was paralyzing. Soon the lure light came to rest a good 500 feet away from us and--though fear froze my muscles--I could see. The distant ball of blue light seemed at first to have found purchase atop a small hill of debris. But debris doesn't twitch. We weren't shown more than that. The message was clear. The direction would not have mattered. The lure light would have revealed the same everywhere. How much further into the caverns did the mass of this creature reach? And for that matter, how much deeper was its bulk towards the true cavern floor? Previous attempts at answering this question had returned inconclusive. Well, I can only say that the cavalry has arrived. I have not been this excited since my early days at the academy. Even the crushing tightness of my sleeping chamber now seems harmless. What are you?

Day 32 It's frustrating. Each step forward turns into hundreds of leaps backwards. None of our attempts at categorization for the matter harvested has provided conclusive data. The variables keep shifting. Well, I'm being somewhat dramatic. There has been one true success. We've managed to isolate an enzyme that has shown itself to be the things only constant. It appears everywhere. We need to know it's function. Observing its effect when introduced to other organisms will surely act as a catapult of understanding. We will start with concentrated injections on pufferfish tomorrow morning. At least they tell us it's morning.

Day 41 The results are in. The enzymes have fully integrated into the pufferfish's biology with staggering results. Mere hours past the first injection its effects had become observable. The puffer's behavior had shifted from lazy drifting within its enclosures artificial current to what I can only describe as unbridled curiosity. Where it simply stared at nothing, nipping at bits of coral, it now followed all movement within its vicinity with eyes of interest and--dare I say--intelligence. But those were just the first changes. As we continued administering the enzyme solution its effects became more prominent, going from behavioral to physical. At this current stage the specimen is nigh unrecognizable as its own species. Holes have opened across its entire form. Pinpricks all the way up to the size of small coins. Under external inspection its insides appear to shift in a constant but irregular pattern. The skin around these openings has shed its scales and turned rubbery in texture. While these particular changes seem to be somewhat consistent, the same cannot be said about the most confounding aspects of the ex-puffer's newfound biology. What we had theorized at first to be a case of metamorphosis, a distinct process with a clear end result, has proven to be far more complicated in nature. Physical characteristics would develop, adding limbs, webbing and the like only to disappear again by the next day. Replaced by a tentacle or perhaps a leathery wing. One morning we had entered the lab, only to see a fully formed humanoid hand--having pushed itself through the puffers then still existing beak--protruding from withing its throat. None of these intense rapid changes seemed to distress the subject in question. Its behavior remained ever curious and docile. I belief what we are observing here is not a finite process. In fact, I believe this state of constant change to be its final form. A biological expression in uncertainty. Finality in change. This entity's physicality defies academic definition. Shifts and changes out of the certain stranglehold of logic. I'm beginning to suspect that our approach here is all wrong. There is only one way to truly understand.

Day 42 IDIOTS. Morons. Absolute baffling buffoons. The lot of them! How can anyone see results like these and cut funding. No practical value my ass. Blindly bumbling their way through the discovery of the century, willfully ignoring the academic wonders staring right at them through eyes of deep unbridled potential. I protested their decision. I was ignored. Further exhibitions are cancelled. We are to return empty handed. There is little time. They are forcing my hand.

Day 44 I stole their worthless treasure. All I could manage. Six vials of concentrated enzyme soup. Not a lot. But it has to do. Our ascent begins in mere hours. I play my part until I can depart.

Day 46 Debriefing took all day. I didn't joke this time around. The prison of bureaucracy finally allowed my escape just this morning and I intend to run far. And then... Well, then i will continue on the only path open to me. The only path to understanding. A path of self-discovery.

Day 53 I can't wait anymore. This reef will be my refuge. My improvised shelter home to threadbare equipment. It will have to do. All is prepared. The first injection calls to me from my workstation. A siren song, promising discovery of a kind yet unthinkable, ungraspable. Well, not for long. I will grasp and I will think in whatever shape this injection dictates. Under the enzyme's alien doctrine, I will be. Be as it is. Exist on its axis. The siren song lures, and I will be lured by my will.

Day 53 It. It. It. Ah. It. I. am. see, feel. Ah. It. It. Herewith me. InMieh shifting. Large. Sleep with Capital. SLEEP, No, WAKE, by which I, no we, no It, no I mean SLAKE (no) EKAW (yes), which means PEEL(yes) = EKELSAW(same), no, Ah, I don't..... When Whyweseeeejjjjjenn

Day 54 I slept. I think I slept. It's hard. To remember. Secondinjection wills soon. Understanding is close. close. Not far. Fart. Fahrenheit in book, hm no, writing is what I'm doing. Yes. I am writing, writing this. But how! Cow? No. How? Yes. Enzymes? No! It. No. I. No. We. No it. Tit. Wit. Bringing withit. Get it together. GRASP! Sort thoughts. Sort of. Yes. Continue on.

Day 55 My skin. I feel it there. No, wrong. I feel (I mean under there) me there. No, also wrong. I feel us there? Under there? Maybe. It doesn't thin. So. I don't think so. It, We, I? No. There is no we. There is no it. There is only eye I. But who? Who is I, is he? There is no he. Not anymore. Only I. The I I've ever been always. He is in the last now. He is now I. Yes, that's it, bit, slit, slip, slipping and sliding summer fun, but it's winter... Ah. Sorry, dear reader clarity is hard. I will continue and Day 56 Finish what he started. Clarity is hard. But order is necessary, no, yes, I think, I think, I know. No order is un-necessary. Am I dreaming? Yes, i'm not, because he is now I and I am waking dreaming. Dreaming awakely, sounds nice, on ice, skating, ah. I get lost so easy. Good. I can catch myself quicker. Good. Onwards then.

Day 57 Closer. Better. Clearer. I am conscious but not. I am not the active I. I am the passive I. That sounds. I am the un-, no, the sub-conscious that is waking. I am the dream. Cream, ah, see? Again. Waking is dreaming. I see. Dreaming is malleable. I am malleable. Reality is? Yes. But only mine. Because I am sub-conscious. Almost finished. Almost finish.

Day 58 Hm. I am I. I have always been I. He is no more. It is done. Finished. I am a function. My function. I am subconscious. That makes un-sense. I am flipped from how he was. He was strange, range, I have mange, this is normal. I see that now. But my normal exist, fists, in my unreality and what was his, their reality. I need to traverse my unreality, guide my sub-conscious through their conscious, launch us, boxes, hm, yeah. Reign it in. They are not unlike I. But they are reverse. And they are beautiful. They are fascinating, spellbinding. My dreamwaking needs their beauty, their strangeness. Their oddities are sustenance.

And I am a function. My function.

Gundren Rockseeker

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:08

Employer of Friyola who hired her to escort his goods from Neverwinter to Phandalin. Gundren was very excited about something that was discovered near Phandalin so he and Sildar Hallwinter went ahead on horseback. On the way both were captured by goblins. Gundren was not found with Sildar at the Cragmaw hideout when the latter was rescued by the party.

Friyola

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:09

She is a young tiefling cleric with red skin of chaotic evil alignment. She was born into a very unstable home and to a neglecting mother. She never knew her father and quickly learned that everyone was only looking out for themselves and those who did help others were taken advantage of. At a young age, she was sold by her drug-addled mother into an apprenticeship for the Ashmadai cult where she rose to the rank of cleric. The cult was very eager to recruit Friyola due to her Asmodean lineage and their worship of Asmodeus. The Ashmadai got wind of the Rockseeker brothers' discovery and where intrigued by it, and so Friyola was sent to infiltrate their business. She managed to gain enough trust of Gundren Rockseeker to hire her for an escort mission.

Sildar Hallwinter

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:09

Male human warrior and member of the Lord's Alliance. Almost 50, he has very dark skin and graying cropped hair. A scar runs vertically from forehead to cheek and through his right eye. It looks like healing magic was used to restore the eye, but a scar was left. He was ambushed and imprisoned by goblins but was later saved by the party when they investigated the Cragmaw hideout.

Toblen Stonehill

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:13

Owner of Stonehill Inn in Phandalin. Short, middle-aged human male bald on top of his head. Brown hair, clean-shaven. Doesn't like Thok because of his orcish heritage and charged them an extra fee to accommodate the party at his inn. He only let them stay because he was intimidated by Thok.
Friendly, jovial voice.

Harbin Wester

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:14

Provisional Townmaster of Phandalin. Fat, pompous old fool. Completely bald with skin hanging down his jowls. Tends to spit when speaking. Thok tried to force his way into the Townmaster's Hall but failed and thus angered the occupant. Wants to enrich himself and values his safety above all else. Shrieking, demanding voice.

Halia Thornton

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:14

Beautiful woman around 40 years old with long raven hair and pale skin. Her long dress is black and accented with white geometric lines. She wears a black cowl that is silver trimmed. She smiles at you.

Wants to advance the Zhentarim influence and take over Phandalin by slowly establishing the guild as its ruler. Smooth, friendly voice.

Adabra Gwynn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:15

Female middle-aged human acolyte of Chauntea, goddess of all things agrarian and also called Earthmother or Great Mother. She has a friendly face and white-streaked black hair tied in a ponytail. The party helped her escape from the manticore. She healed Hypolite and gifted the party a Healing Potion. She left her temple and can now be found at the temporarily unattended Shrine of Luck in Phandalin.

Linene Graywind

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:17

Attractive 35-year-old human woman with brown hair and dark eyes. Manager of Lionshield Coster, which is part of the Lionshield merchant company based in Yartar to the east of Phandalin. Linene has a 10-year-old daughter named Minghee.

Bren

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:17

12-year-old serving boy with blonde hair and shy persona. Was threatened to be killed by Friyola so he would comply with a request.

Hoq

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:18

Captured female goblin who was later killed by the party.

Thamda Cherrywind

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:18

Older female halfling and stable owner in Phandalin. Party inquired prices for horses but discovered they couldn’t afford even one.

Eed

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:34

In a far-off land a child was born to a family of high nobility. But with power often comes the craving for more. And so, the noble parents sold their child to a powerful witch just outside their kingdom's borders. In return the witch would grant them power to further their own political agendas. However, a minor deity, worshipped as an aspect of mercy, took pity on the child and intervened. It infused her with their own essence which would act as blockage, preventing the witch's contract from taking hold. So, the child grew up resented by her parents.

Over years the witch would appear to the child again and again. Influencing her. Shaping her. Manipulating her. Until the witch finally revealed the actions of her parents. After years of abuse and the witch's manipulation she finally lost control and set fire to her parents' mansion. Ignoring her parents begging for mercy she locked them in their bedroom as the flames started closing in. She collapsed on the floor and let the flames take her.

This single utterly merciless act shattered the binding put on the contract by the deity and stained its essence irreversibly. Now, with the binding broken, the contract took full effect and tied her to the witch. The parents, now nothing but mere ash, never received their part of the bargain. Eed awoke several days later in a dark forest near the kingdom's border. Alone. She got up and started to walk. Unsure where to go next...

This character is made up of two core aspects:

1. The duality of the magical forces within her. Eed has two opposing forces always pulling her in different directions within her. The essence of the mercy deity, while corrupted due to her heinous act, is still an essential part that makes up her core being and will always pull her in the direction of good. The witch's contract however now pulls her to give more into her anger and tries to pull her deeper into the evil alignment entirely aside from the direct influences the witch may choose to take in the future. This is also why the character has the chaotic neutral alignment for now as she is quite literally being pulled in two directions.
2. Her complete inexperience with dealing with the real world and the people in it. Having grown up in an environment of constant political manipulation, neglect, and isolation she never had anyone teach her about how the world works nevertheless even seeing the world beyond the mansion's grounds. She learned to manipulate others and how to talk to them but not much beyond that. Essentially being a child in a young woman's body. Learning when the right time to give in to her evil nature and when it is inappropriate could be one of the major themes for her character arch.

Dio

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:34

Dio comes from a very humble background, but he is not content with that and wants to be famous! He's narcissistic and wants everyone to know how great he is, so he travels the world doing all kinds of shows to get people to love him. He grew up in Beregost.

Aersius

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:35

I never talk about my past. And I assure you, there is only one being alive who knows my origins and my history. I was born to evil and shaped by it, in the flames of eternal inferno; it is in me and part of who I am, though I refuse to be a slave to it.

My birth father is a powerful wizard, who succumbed to the dark arts. He struck a bargain with a fallen celestial: his firstborn for eternal life. I am that firstborn and spent my early life in servitude to dark powers. I never questioned it, until one day I was tasked with something I refused to complete, and instead slew my master to gain my freedom. Despite this I know I will never be completely free. Safety is an illusion; therefore, I prefer to live my life in the shadows, on the fringes of society.

I don't talk about my past. Whenever someone asks about it, I spin some sad story - easy to do, when man is a tiefling and is therefore mistrusted by default - or dodge the question altogether. I live alone; always have. Aside from my raven the shadows are my only friends. However, living among the shadows for most of my life, I made some allies along the way, mostly in the underbelly of civilization.

Especially Favria, the current leader of the Ashmadai cult, is a close ally. I stood by her when she usurped her predecessor, and for that she owes me a debt. I never boast about it, and unless one has been there when it all went down, they may have never heard of it. However, it is no secret that there is a certain level of mutual trust between us. I will always accept her calling, wherever she needs me.

Wash, "King of Thieves", still sees me as one of his subjects. I usually don't mind, as there are better thieves than myself at his disposal, so I am usually left to my own devices. Here and there I may enjoy joining an exhilarating heist or complex plot of his devising.

My life on the run has hardened me, and I do not shy from any crime or acts of violence. Though I have long learned that avoiding a conflict is the best way to stay unnoticed and provides the best survival odds. During my life among the outlaws and outcasts, I also learned the value of wit and good storytelling; they are powerful weapons when wielded well.

Bradwick

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:35

Bradwick Bell Junior grew up in the Feywild where he lived in a large commune of satyrs, fairies, goblinoids, pixies and all other kinds of fae. (Lovingly referred to as his fratremity derived from the terms fraternity and sorority.)

He was always very popular for his open disposition and energy that would turn any party he arrived at into a real rager. He also enjoyed showing off in front of people and regularly would take on challenges or dares from members of his community. He quickly developed a reputation for never backing down from a challenge.

One morning, after another all night rager, Bradwick was wandering through the forest around his fratremities camp when he encountered a radiant, otherworldly person sitting, leaning against an unusually straight tree that seemed to tower so far over all other trees that Bradwick could not make out its crown. They started talking and had a very pleasant conversation. They asked questions about Bradwick. His goals, his desires, and many other personal questions. Eventually they presented him with a challenge of their own. They were holding a grand contest of strength. Anyone was allowed to enter. They dared him to enter their contest and go into the material plane to measure his skill against all other contestants. Bradwick of course, not wanting to back down, agreed and swore an oath to the strange person. Swearing that he will dedicate himself to this contest and prove that he, Bradwick Bell Junior, could become the material realm's greatest and most renowned hero.

The person smiled, shook his hand, and gave him a metal rod with a glass bead slid onto it and small sheet of paper. It had rules written on it.

The being Bradwick met and swore his oath to is Immolin. A deity of competition, rivalry and dedication worshipped not by a specific culture but by many individuals across the continent, coming from wildly different backgrounds and cultures.

After holding a tear- and booze-filled goodbye-party, Bradwick left his fratremity behind and made his way out of the Feywild to complete his most recent dare.

When we find him in the story he has arrived in the material plane about a month ago and is still adjusting to the major difference in lifestyles he is now confronted with. He is currently looking to find a fellow contestant by the name Thrumnar Thanar Thuztar to challenge him and win his first bead.

Hyppolite

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:08

He is a 100-year-old high elf wizard with long golden hair and a long angular face. He fled the destruction of the city of Myth Drannor, and the demands of his noble family, and has been travelling and researching according to his own interests ever since.

Keth aided Hyppolite against a goblin ambush and the latter decided to hire the orc who agreed to the deal provided he would still be able to follow up on clues regarding the whereabouts of his mother. The two travelled to Phandalin together where they met Friyola. Hyppolite's father, Yvellios, is a respected elder councilman who has taken up various political leadership roles. Hyppolite's mother is called Sanaphia, and she is a magic user artist of some fame.

As a child Hyppolite has been doing typical elf things for a while: archery and other traditional weapons, basics of music and some art forms. But he quite early became a magic obsessed outsider nerd. His mother's magic use has both inspired and frustrated him by being enchanting and impractical at the same time and he has similarly ambiguous feelings about the culture of elf magic use, which promotes inner and outer harmony, the significance of elven traditions, and mature, responsible magic use. Hyppolite is fascinated by magic as a scientific puzzle and a means of personal or political power. More similar to how a human wizard would usually be.

So Hyppolite would always encounter a sort of "you are not ready" attitude from potential teachers of wizardry, with expectations of "mastering the basics and respecting the traditions more". This resulted in a haphazard and theory-heavy self-taught education. All this has not been dramatic, every involved elf treating Hyppolite with politeness, kindness and condescension.

Hyppolite is rather smart and gifted, by jumping through a few hoops he could have become a more powerful wizard by now.

It has only been 4 years since Myth Drannor was destroyed again (1487 DR). Hyppolite's parents are heavily involved in organizing and aiding the survivors, and Hyppolite felt a slight pressure that he should take part in this. The disaster, caused by the aggression of greedy human wizards, has underscored Hyppolite's differences with his community: most elves have become wearier of powerful magic, while Hyppolite feels that Myth Drannor should have had even more powerful magic to protect it and defeat its enemies.

In the process of fleeing and trying to resettle it was relatively easy to say goodbye to his old life and depart for the libraries of human cities. In Baldur's Gate Hyppolite earned his keep for a while by tutoring children of wealthy families, a job that he found boring and unpleasant.

And so Hyppolite started wandering north, in search of knowledge and power.

Keth Thok

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:08

Keth Thok is a male half-orc fighter of lawful good alignment who is searching for his human mother by the name of Westra Windrivver. She lived in Neverwinter and was presumably captured by raiding orcs. While pregnant with Keth she escaped her captors and was found by patrolling soldiers. She delivered the child at a military outpost but left her baby there and left for an unknown location. Keth was thus raised by the military and proved to be very competent as a soldier. He eventually rose to the rank of officer in the Lord's Alliance. At some point he asked for and was granted leave and set out to search for his mother. Keth aided a high elf wizard Hyppolite against a goblin ambush and the latter decided to hire the orc who agreed to the deal provided he would still be able to follow up on clues regarding the whereabouts of his mother. The two travelled to Phandalin together where they met Friyola.

Tarbin Tul

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:51

Tarbin Tul performed along the High Road and always looked for new tunes to add to his enormous collection. Circa 1491 DR, while staying at the Wayside Inn one night, he accidentally witnessed an undead attack. The undead had been created by the cult of Myrkul led by Ularan Mortus. A group of adventurers was able to defend the inn against the attack.

Later, while Tarbin was again staying at the Wayside Inn, a cult of Talos led by Fheralai Stormsworn took over the inn. Although the cultists' ritual to turn the inn into a temple of Talos was stopped in time, they managed to kidnap Tarbin. He was taken to the death knight-dreadnaught, a ship controlled by the death knight Emberlost. Fheralai had taken over the ship from the Myrkul cult but was unable to steer it. She forced Tarbin to perform songs from Anauria, the death knight's lost home. This appeased Emberlost, convincing him to tolerate Fheralai and let her steer the ship as long as the bard kept performing.

Silla Scalesweep

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:51

Silla was a young, highly chatty halfling woman with lengthy braided hair. She was proficient with the harmonica and enjoyed performing in front of an audience.

Circa 1491 DR, Silla traveled from Neverwinter to Leilon in the hopes of being hired as a fisher by Valdi Estapaar, the town's fisheries overseer. On her way, she stayed at the Wayside Inn and accidentally witnessed an undead attack. The undead had been created by a cult of Myrkul. A group of adventurers was able to defend the inn against the attack. Silla then accompanied the adventurers on their way to Leilon.

Elvar Kurn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 16:30

First appearance: Daring Dozen 98

Elvar Kurn is a solitary scholar turned zealot, once a coastal archivist in Waterdeep with an interest in drowned histories and divine storms. After surviving a shipwreck during his mid-thirties—during which lightning struck his vessel and he alone emerged unharmed—Elvar became obsessed with Talos. He interpreted his survival as a sign, a call, and abandoned his post, traveling the western coast in search of storm-blessed ruins and forgotten places of worship.
He eventually arrived at the Mere of Dead Men, where he uncovered crumbling remnants of carvings, drowned symbols, and shattered stone tablets—some of which bore the ramblings of a long-dead triton prophet. Elvar believed these fragments to be sacred and spent years reconstructing them into a complete text, compelled by recurring dreams of waves rising over towers and voices whispering in thunderclaps. He bound his work into a hand-copied journal, and left it behind intentionally, guided by the belief that another would come—"the one the lightning bends towards."
He may still be alive—watching from afar, waiting for the storm to choose its next mouthpiece. Or perhaps he offered himself to the sea after completing his task, trusting Talos to carry the book to where it needed to go.

Elvar Kurn appears gaunt and salt-worn, as though the sea has been slowly reclaiming him. His once-practical robes are threadbare and stained with salt and algae, clinging damply to his wiry frame. His skin is wind-chapped and pallid, with faint scarring along his jaw. His fingers are ink-stained, the nails dark and cracked, always twitching.
His eyes are pale blue and sharp with a restless intensity. When he speaks, his voice is hoarse and low, but there's a tension in it. Around his neck hangs a weathered pendant of three jagged lightning bolts radiating from a central point, etched crudely into driftwood.

Jharkhas Vohmarnath

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 17:19

The triton who wrote the original journal was once known as Jharkhas Vohmarnath of the Drowned Chorus, a name now lost to history and swallowed by the mire. Born in the deep ocean temples of a now-sunken coastal city, Jharkas Vohmarnath was raised in a society that revered elemental balance—but he always leaned too far into awe. As a young acolyte, he became fixated on surface storms, fascinated not with harmony but with the fury of nature. When the temple elders warned him against "listening too closely," Jharkhas instead dove deeper—both into the trenches and into Talos's whispered promises.

He became obsessed with visions of rising tides and cracking sky. When he finally surfaced to walk among the air-breathers of Myar Aralyn, he claimed to be Talos's chosen. His peers thought him eccentric but harmless—until the rituals began. Jharkhas wandered the alleys, etching prayers into barnacled stones and bleeding into fountains. When the storms came and the city began to sink, no one could tell whether he had warned them—or caused it. His final days were spent in a self-built shrine of coral and bone, muttering into flooded halls.

Jharkhas was tall for a triton, broad-shouldered, with sea-weathered turquoise skin mottled with deep green. His gills flared higher up on his neck than most, and his hair—long, silver, and often unbound—floated like seagrass when he moved. His eyes were solid opal-white, unfocused, as though he stared into a storm only he could see. Barnacle scars clung to his forearms and cheeks where he had once allowed sea life to attach, calling them "gifts of the tide." He wore no armor—only layers of rotted silk and kelp-bound wrappings, each inscribed with words in Primordial that glowed faintly when wet. His voice was breathy, rasping, sometimes bubbling as if still underwater, and he often spoke in repetition, like waves breaking over themselves. There was always a salt crust in the corners of his mouth.

Keresta Delvingstone

Friday, 2 May 2025 00:16

The leader of the temple of Shar is Keresta Delvingstone, a human female in her 20s with very pale skin and black shoulder-length hair. Something feels very off about here and she gives you the shivers whenever you see her. She does not act like someone her age either. As far as you could tell, she's always been the leader of this temple, and only older people hint at their having been someone else before her. (Klyde's perspective)

Traits

Legendary Resistance (3/Day). If the cleric fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Dark Devotion. The cleric has advantage on saving throws against being charmed or frightened.

Improved Reaper. When the cleric casts a necromancy spell that targets only one creature, the spell can instead target two creatures within range and within 5 feet of each other.

Inescapable Destruction. Necrotic damage dealt by the cleric ignores resistance to necrotic damage.

Shadow Ambush. The cleric deals an additional 4d8 necrotic damage when she makes attacks while in dim light or darkness.

Actions

Multiattack. The cleric makes two melee attacks.

Mace. Melee Weapon Attack: +8 to hit, reach 5 ft., one creature. Hit: 6 (1d6 + 3) bludgeoning damage, plus 9 (2d8) necrotic damage.

Channel Divinity: Cloak of Shadows. If the cleric is in an obscured area, she becomes invisible until the end of her next turn or if she attacks or casts a spell.

Spellcasting. The cleric casts one of the following spells, using Wisdom as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 18):

At will: blindness/deafness, chill touch, darkness

2/day each: blink, dispel magic, inflict wounds, ray of enfeeblement, vampiric touch

Bonus Actions

Shadow Step. If the cleric is in dim light or darkness, she magically teleports up to 60 feet to an unoccupied space she can see that is also in dim light or darkness. The next attack roll the cleric makes has advantage.

Reactions

Radiant Retort. When the cleric is hit with radiant damage, she takes no damage and deals double the damage to the attacker.

Legendary Actions

Legendary Action Uses: 3. Immediately after another creature's turn, the cleric can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The cleric regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Mace. The cleric makes two melee attacks.

Channel Divinity. The cleric uses Channel Divinity.

Cast a Spell. The cleric uses Spellcasting to cast a spell.

Zzara'kath

Friday, 2 May 2025 02:08

The mind flayer Zzara'kath is a tall and slender mind flayer with a purple-blue hue to its skin, making it look almost ethereal. Its long, slender tentacles writhe constantly, giving an unsettling air of menace. Its eyes glow with an eerie green light, which often betrays its calculating and cold nature. Driven by an insatiable hunger for knowledge and power, Zzara'kath is the mastermind behind the colossal neothelid. It dresses in flowing, dark robes adorned with arcane symbols. Zzara'kath projects thoughts that are soft but command attention, reflecting its detached superiority. Zzara'kath regards the duergar as useful but expendable tools, valuing their loyalty and endurance but showing no concern for their well-being.

Without warning, a pulse of cold pressure stirs the air near her hand. There's no flash, no sound—just a flicker in reality like a skipped heartbeat. When she looks down, the ring is there. It wasn't a moment ago. A dark, silver band set with a dull green gem, slick with an unnatural sheen, now encircles her finger.
It tightens—not painfully, but with purpose. And then:

> "Ah… you wear me again."
> The voice is inside her mind, but not invasive. Smooth. Patient. Supernaturally precise.
> "You may not remember placing me there, but don't be alarmed. I have merely… returned."

A pause. She feels the gem grow warm—like thought, not heat.

> "We've shared space before. I remember your thoughts. Your ambition. Your questions. I share them."
> "My name is Zzara'kath. Once mind, now vessel. I mean you no harm."

Another pause. A hint of reverence creeps into its mental tone.

> "I know you don't trust easily. That's wise. But I offer something the others cannot: knowledge preserved from extinction. Power distilled by intellect unbound by flesh. You need not serve me. Only listen."

The ring tightens just slightly again, as if bracing for rejection.

> "And if you'll permit me... I can be useful."

The mind flayer's soul within the ring is able to cast detect thoughts, dominate monster on Yalda. It can also plane shift the ring to save it from destruction or a similar fate. Its goal is to influence the party to further his goal of immortality, it is careful not to antagonize Yalda, however.

General Veyra Halbrune is a seasoned human commander of Waterdeep's defenses, a woman of at least sixty winters whose presence commands attention. Her frame is tall but wiry, built from decades of soldiering, and she carries herself with upright discipline despite the weight of her years. Her dark hair has turned to steel gray, worn pulled back and tied in a no-nonsense knot. Her face is lined, her skin weathered from time on campaign, and her sharp brown eyes seem to pierce you. A faded scar cuts across her left cheek. She favors a dark blue military cloak pinned with the crest of Waterdeep, over sturdy plate that is scuffed but meticulously maintained.

Veyra was born the daughter of a stonemason, raised in the Dock Ward where hardship was common. She enlisted in the City Guard as soon as she was able, driven by a mixture of hunger, duty, and a desire for something more than poverty. From guard patrols to campaigns along the Sword Coast, she earned her rank through persistence, tactical acuity, and an ability to inspire soldiers to follow her even into grave danger. She is known for holding the line when others faltered, a commander who never asks of her troops what she would not do herself.

As a leader, she is pragmatic and uncompromising. She respects competence and despises political maneuvering, which has often made her clash with Waterdeep's nobility. Still, her record has made her indispensable. With the vampire threat descending under cover of clouds and mist, she has taken personal command of the defense of the city, coordinating patrols and missions from her headquarters.

Despite her stern demeanor, she has a dry wit and a quiet warmth for those she trusts. Rumors circulate about her personal life—some suggest she was married once, others whisper about lovers of both sexes in her youth—but she keeps such matters private. What is certain is that she will fight to her last breath to keep Waterdeep standing, and she expects the same of those under her command.

TRAITS

Legendary Resistance (3/Day, or 4/Day in Lair). If the vampire fails a saving throw, it can choose to succeed instead.

Misty Escape. If the vampire drops to 0 Hit Points outside its resting place, the vampire uses Shape-Shift to become mist (no action required). If it can't use Shape-Shift, it is destroyed.

While it has 0 Hit Points in mist form, it can't return to its vampire form, and it must reach its resting place within 2 hours or be destroyed. Once in its resting place, it returns to its vampire form and has the Paralyzed condition until it regains any Hit Points, and it regains 1 Hit Point after spending 1 hour there.

Spider Climb. The vampire can climb difficult surfaces, including along ceilings, without needing to make an ability check.

Vampire Weakness. The vampire has these weaknesses:

Forbiddance. The vampire can't enter a residence without an invitation from an occupant.
Running Water. The vampire takes 20 Acid damage if it ends its turn in running water.
Stake to the Heart. If a weapon that deals Piercing damage is driven into the vampire's heart while the vampire has the Incapacitated condition in its resting place, the vampire has the Paralyzed condition until the weapon is removed.
Sunlight. The vampire takes 20 Radiant damage if it starts its turn in sunlight. While in sunlight, it has Disadvantage on attack rolls and ability checks.

ACTIONS

Multiattack (Vampire Form Only). The vampire makes two Grave Strike attacks and uses Bite.

Grave Strike (Vampire Form Only). Melee Attack Roll: +9, reach 5 ft. Hit: 8 (1d8 + 4) Bludgeoning damage plus 7 (2d6) Necrotic damage. If the target is a Large or smaller creature, it has the Grappled condition (escape DC 14) from one of two hands.

Bite (Bat or Vampire Form Only). Constitution Saving Throw: DC 17, one creature within 5 feet that is willing or that has the Grappled, Incapacitated, or Restrained condition. Failure: 6 (1d4 + 4) Piercing damage plus 13 (3d8) Necrotic damage. The target's Hit Point maximum decreases by an amount equal to the Necrotic damage taken, and the vampire regains Hit Points equal to that amount. A Humanoid reduced to 0 Hit Points by this damage and then buried rises the following sunset as a Vampire Spawn under the vampire's control.

BONUS ACTIONS

Charm (Recharge 5–6). The vampire casts Charm Person, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 17), and the duration is 24 hours. The Charmed target is a willing recipient of the vampire's Bite, the damage of which doesn't end the spell. When the spell ends, the target is unaware it was Charmed by the vampire.

Shape-Shift. If the vampire isn't in sunlight or running water, it shape-shifts into a Tiny bat (Speed 5 ft., Fly Speed 30 ft.) or a Medium cloud of mist (Speed 5 ft., Fly Speed 20 ft. [hover]), or it returns to its vampire form. Anything it is wearing transforms with it.

While in bat form, the vampire can't speak. Its game statistics, other than its size and Speed, are unchanged.

While in mist form, the vampire can't take any actions, speak, or manipulate objects. It is weightless and can enter an enemy's space and stop there. If air can pass through a space, the mist can do so, but it can't pass through liquid. It has Resistance to all damage, except the damage it takes from sunlight.

LEGENDARY ACTIONS

Legendary Action Uses: 3 (4 in Lair). Immediately after another creature's turn, the vampire can expend a use to take one of the following actions. The vampire regains all expended uses at the start of each of its turns.

Beguile. The vampire casts Command, requiring no spell components and using Charisma as the spellcasting ability (spell save DC 17). The vampire can't take this action again until the start of its next turn.

Deathless Strike. The vampire moves up to half its Speed, and it makes one Grave Strike attack.

Adria Duskryn presents herself as a woman in her early thirties, with long black hair tied back in a braid that falls to her mid-back. Her skin is pale, her features perfectly symmetrical, and her dark almond-shaped eyes hold an unnerving focus. Her lips often curl at the edge of a private smile. She dresses in fine practical pants and a short jacket. A silver chain hangs at her throat, the pendant usually hidden beneath fabric.

She gives the impression of cultured confidence. Her voice is warm and measured, with a faint accent that is difficult to place. She approaches others with an ease that feels natural, leaning on charm, attentive listening, and a practiced air of intimacy. But beneath the veneer, Adria is a predator. The townhouse where she leads Yalda is carefully prepared—velvet curtains drawn tight, silvered mirrors removed, and the faint perfume of incense masking other scents. When her charm fails and the mask slips, her expression hardens. Her eyes flash red, and her fangs extend as she moves with sudden, brutal speed.

Adria is not an ancient vampire, but she is cunning, ambitious, and eager to prove herself among her kind. Her role in the nest is that of a seducer and recruiter, specializing in exploiting desire, loneliness, or ambition. With Waterdeep under siege and clouds blotting out the sun, she revels in her element—free to stalk the city openly at night and even by day.

Orien

Sunday, 21 September 2025 23:36

Orien, known as the Pale Child, appears as a boy of perhaps twelve winters, slim and frail-looking, with pale skin stretched tight over delicate features. His hair is a shock of white-blond, and his wide eyes give him the unsettling look of someone both innocent and immeasurably old. He dresses in fine but antiquated garments—silks and velvets in muted shades, trimmed with lace that has gone out of fashion centuries ago. When he speaks, his voice is light and clear, but every word carries a measured weight, as if chosen with care.

Turned in childhood over a thousand years ago, Orien has endured by bending to masters stronger than himself. His current servitude is to the ancient lich Ularan Mortus who is directing the siege of Waterdeep. Inwardly, he hungers for release from this bond, though he will not openly admit it. He watches the party with keen interest, gauging whether they might be tools to sever his chains.

The Thralls (Bodyguards)
Orien's closest protectors are two figures once celebrated across the Sword Coast, now bound to him by his ancient blood. They have not aged beyond their prime, their bodies preserved by vampiric influence, their strength warped into something monstrous. They move with the discipline of seasoned warriors but speak rarely, their loyalty absolute.

- Chanar Masq'il'yr (Zhent champion)
  A half-drow warrior once renowned for turning against his Zhentarim masters and helping defend the Dalelands during the Dalelands conflicts over a hundread years ago. His deeds were never widely celebrated in Waterdeep, but bards in Cormyr and Sembia still recall his betrayal of Zhentil Keep as a turning point.
- Caelum Rhaevaern (Elven mage-knight)
  A sun elf spellsword from Myth Drannor, remembered for leading a band of adventurers that held back fiendish forces during the city's fall. He was believed slain when the city fell, but in truth he was captured, turned, and bound.

Knowledge Check (History)

- DC 18: Recognize Chanar Masq'il'yr as a Zhent warrior who betrayed Zhentil Keep and aided the Dalelands.
- DC 20: Recall that Caelum Rhaevaern was among the last defenders of Myth Drannor before its first fall almost 800 years ago, a mage-knight whose sacrifice bought others time to flee.
- DC 22: Piece together that both were thought long dead, their fates unrecorded—a troubling match for their unnaturally preserved forms.

Role in the Story
Orien is both a danger and a potential opportunity. He serves his master Ularan Mortus but longs to free himself. His conversations with the party may reveal veiled hints of this ambition. If pressed, he will not speak of rebellion openly, but he might arrange circumstances where the party can harm his master without him appearing disloyal.

Vaeril Quenya Ara

Friday, 28 November 2025 17:23

Vaeril Quenya Ara is Yalda's father, an elf and former follower of Talos. He was consumed by Fugue-weariness: not fear of death, but exhaustion with existence itself, with birth, labor, decay, death, and the soul's onward passage. His frustration with mortality and repetition drove him toward forbidden knowledge of the Nightwalker.
That obsession led to the death of his human wife and left Yalda marked by both Talos and the Nightwalker's shadow. Afterward, Ularan Mortus bound Vaeril into service and twisted him into a death knight.

The party defeated Vaeril and spoke with his soul at the Shard of the Moon through magic. There, personal truths about Yalda and her father were revealed, along with the location of Ularan's island base. Later, Vaeril's soul was bound to a Talos-controlled ship, where the party confronted him again. With Yalda's help, he finally accepted his role, released his anger, and was able to pass on.

Highharvestide

Tuesday, 29 April 2025 19:51

Highharvestide was an annual festival in the Calendar of Harptos, taking place between 30 Eleint and 1 Marpenoth. It was traditionally a feast to celebrate the harvest and the abundance of food, but also the time when those wishing to travel left on their journeys before winter set in.

Preparations for the feast started as early as a tenday before, while preparing, cooking, and preserving the harvest for the cold winter months. Traditions varied from community to community, but examples of festive activity included food-related contests; races and challenges of skill and strength; receiving homemade sweets from the local clergy; and priests blessing larders, wine cellars, grain bins, and food preserves.

This day was often an important anniversary to various governments. Often, taxes and tithes came due, rulers held "open courts" to hear the concerns of their citizens, oaths were publicly renewed, troops received marching orders to new duty stations, and guilds met to confer on prices and rate changes for goods and services.

According to tradition, dwarves only drank water and elves drank only dew on this day. However, these traditions began to fade in the 14th and 15th century DR.

It was said that children born on this day were favored by Tymora to have lifelong good luck but be smitten with wanderlust. Another legend was that human females born on this day had control over their reproductive system (i.e., got pregnant only when they wanted to) by force of will alone, and that they could instantly sense when they had been poisoned, either by ingestion or being bitten by a venomous creature for example.

Journal of the Rising Tide

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 15:30

Transcribed by Elvar Kurn, 1491 DR
Believed to be the writings of an unknown triton devotee of Talos, recovered from submerged ruins beneath the Mere of Dead Men.

6 Flamerule, 882 DR
They do not hear it. Not truly. The sea hums with pressure—like lungs full of breath held too long. I saw a heron land upon the temple's highest spire and burst into flame without sound. The acolytes took it as ill omen. I took it as invitation. Talos watches. He waits. I will learn His name in thunder.

19 Eleint, 882 DR
I found the first mouth in the stone. It opened at low tide and whispered in currents I was not meant to survive. I brought it blood. Not much. Just enough for a reply. The priests say the city sings with pride. I hear it weep for collapse. Talos laughs through the barnacles now. His voice is in the grit behind my teeth.

1 Uktar, 882 DR
They sealed the lower sanctum. Fools. What's below is not trapped—it is dormant. The pressure bends the walls like breath on glass. I watched the high priest blink out of time today. Not gone—just... misplaced. The coral on his staff was not there before. We are not building temples anymore. We are becoming them.

13 Nightal, 882 DR
The water does not obey the moon now. It dances to another rhythm—one only I remember. I walked the drowned market and saw fish bartering teeth. A child offered me a pearl that whispered "soon." I swallowed it. It still hums when I sleep. My dreams bleed salt. The stars are wrong. Or the sea is right.

28 Nightal, 882 DR
We held council. I sat beside a jellyfish that taught me grammar. It had no mouth. I understood everything. The air crackled blue. The tide flowed upward. I removed my skin and found inscriptions beneath. I blinked. It returned. My reflection has stopped mirroring me. I no longer blink. I no longer need to.

10 Hammer, 883 DR
The city has knelt. Not crumbled—knelt. As a beast bends to the hand that feeds it lightning. The gates are open, though no one unlocked them. Salt drips from the ceilings. It rains from below. The deep ones return. They say nothing. They only wait. I drank the sea whole last night. It drank me back.

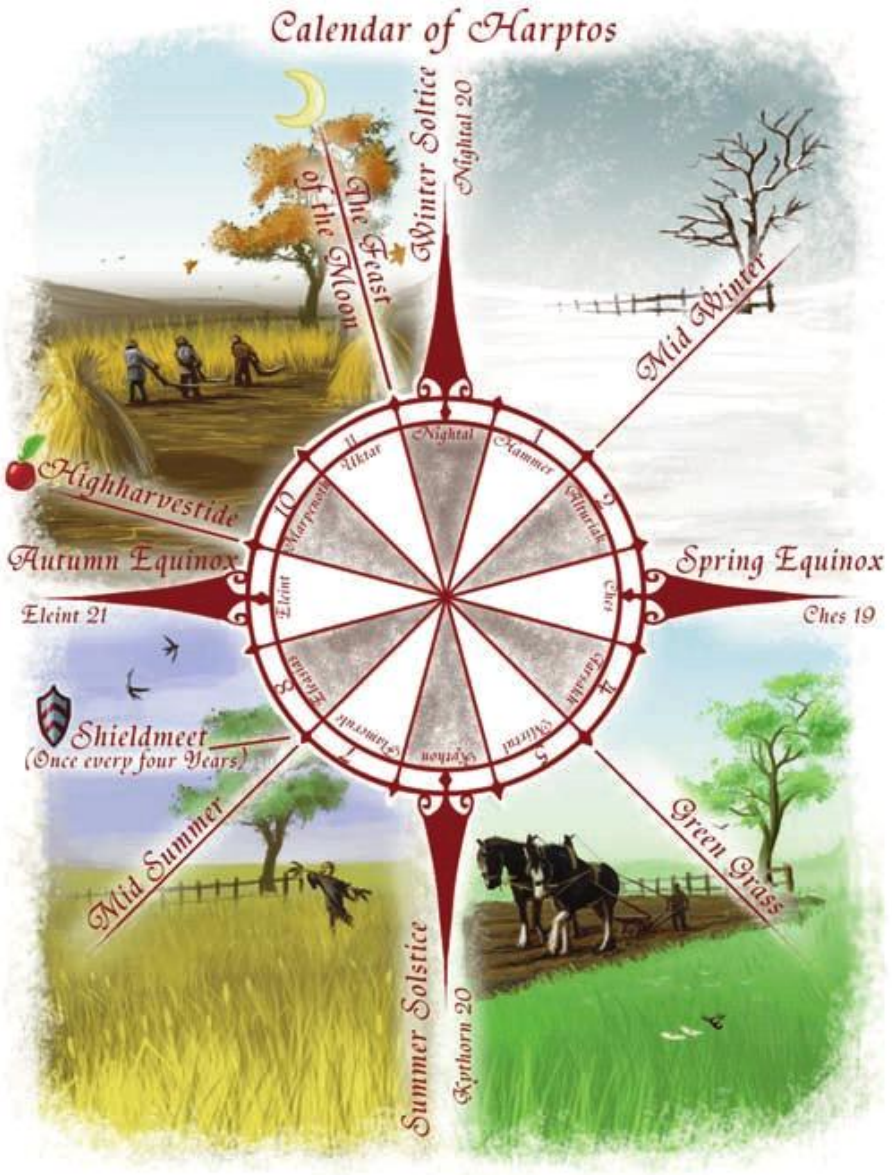

2 Alturiak, 883 DR
I cannot remember my name, so I carved it into the shell of a godfish and set it loose. It swims still, carrying who I was away from who I am. The voice of Talos no longer speaks to me—it screams. My veins are wires of storm. I saw the end of the city. I clapped. I howled. I forgave it. I became wet thunder.

18 Ches, 883 DR
There is no more city. There is no more water. There is no more page. But I write. I write with teeth. I write with currents. This book is not a book. This book is a mirror laid flat across a drowning world. Yalda—yes, you—your name is in the foam. You stand where I ended. You breathe what I exhaled. You are the next cry.

Lord’s Alliance

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:10

The Lord’s Alliance is a political and military coalition of powerful city-states and leaders across the Sword Coast and beyond, united to maintain stability, order, and mutual defense. Its members—such as Neverwinter, Waterdeep, and Baldur’s Gate—cooperate on matters like trade, military threats, and suppressing chaos or rebellion. Though ostensibly noble in purpose, the Alliance is known for internal rivalries, power plays, and putting the interests of its member cities first. It’s often seen as lawful, pragmatic, and sometimes heavy-handed.

Zhentarim

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:12

The Zhentarim, also known as the Black Network, is a shadowy organization that mixes mercenary work, espionage, and organized crime. Publicly, they present themselves as a merchant consortium offering protection and trade services—but behind the scenes, they deal in smuggling, assassination, and power-brokering. The Zhentarim value strength, ambition, and control, and they often embed agents in positions of influence across cities and factions. While not inherently evil, their methods are ruthless and self-serving.

Grimhold

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 02:56

The village of Grimhold is nestled deep within the labyrinthine tunnels of the Underdark, hidden away in a massive, echoing cavern. The cavern is dimly lit by bioluminescent fungi and the faint, eerie glow of luminescent crystals embedded in the walls, casting an otherworldly light over the village.

Homes and Structures:
The duergar homes and buildings are meticulously carved into the cavern walls, their facades blending seamlessly with the natural rock. Each dwelling is accessed via narrow stone steps and ladders, creating a tiered appearance as they climb the walls of the cavern. The homes themselves are small but sturdy, with thick stone doors to provide security and insulation. Iron sconces holding flickering torches line the entrances, providing additional light.

Central Square:
At the heart of the village is a central square, an open space with a few stone benches and a large, communal fire pit. The square is the social hub of Grimhold, where villagers gather to share news, hold meetings, and strengthen their sense of community. The fire pit, surrounded by well-worn stones, is always burning, its flames a symbol of the villagers' enduring spirit.

The Forge and the Tavern:
Two prominent buildings in the village are Dargol's forge and Gritta's tavern. The forge is located near the entrance to the cavern, its chimneys directing smoke through natural vents to the surface. The constant clanging of metal can be heard as Dargol and his apprentices work tirelessly. The tavern, known as the "Ember's Rest," is situated near the central square. It's a warm, inviting place where the villagers can briefly escape their harsh reality, with Gritta's brews providing a welcome respite.

Mines and Secret Tunnels:
Behind the main living areas are the mines, where Morgra oversees the extraction of precious minerals and metals demanded by the mindflayers. These tunnels are extensive and treacherous, with hidden passages and secret chambers used by the resistance. Morgra and her team use these secret tunnels to smuggle supplies and plan their eventual uprising.

The Shrine:
Tucked away in a secluded corner of the cavern is Thalgrim shrine. This sacred space is adorned with ancient runes and carved stone idols representing the duergar's ancestors and earth spirits. Here, Thalgrim performs healing rituals and offers spiritual guidance, keeping hope alive among the villagers.

Mintarn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:27

Mintarn is a small, mountainous island nation located in the Sea of Swords, west of the Sword Coast. Though it lacks fertile land or major natural resources, Mintarn has carved out a place of influence through its skilled mercenaries, naval strength, and strategic neutrality. The island is known for its militaristic culture, pragmatic governance, and emphasis on personal freedom, strength, and profit.
The city of Mintarn, its capital, is a fortified coastal hub where mercenary companies, pirates, diplomats, and merchants converge. Law and order are maintained not through ideology, but through clearly enforced contracts and codes of conduct. Outsiders can expect fairness if they follow the rules—but little sympathy if they don't.
Mintarn sells its services widely, providing soldiers, guards, and military advisors to powerful factions across the Realms, including the Lord's Alliance, though it remains politically unaffiliated. Its forces are known for discipline and effectiveness, making them a go-to solution when cities need muscle without strings attached.
Culturally, Mintarn values merit over bloodline, and its people are shaped by harsh terrain and a history of self-reliance. Many Mintarners are raised to fight, command, or negotiate from a young age, and while they can be gruff or hard-nosed, they also take pride in keeping their word.
Though not overtly hostile or villainous, Mintarn's loyalty is to gold first and ideals second—making it a useful ally, but a dangerous enemy or competitor.

Beregost

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:34

Beregost is a small but well-traveled town in Amn, located along the Coast Way between Baldur's Gate and Nashkel. It serves as a key stopover for merchants, adventurers, and travelers moving along the trade route. Known for its inns, smithies, and hardworking population, Beregost thrives on steady commerce and regional trade.
The town is home to the Temple of Lathander, which plays a central role in the local community, and the Thunderhammer Smithy, run by the skilled dwarf blacksmith Taerom Fuiruim. While not a major power, Beregost is a practical and resilient settlement that provides shelter, services, and occasional intrigue to those passing through the region.

Sleeping Giant Inn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 12:16

Very big and luxurious inn in the expensive Tower District in Neverwinter. It gets its name from a giant wooden relief spread over the inside walls of the building depicting a sleeping giant. At first you do not notice the relief because it is so big but after a while you start to piece it together.
The inn has 4 total levels, including a parterre area farther in. The above levels have a gallery and the second-highest level sports an island that you can use to get from one side of the building to the other.

Mere of Dead Men

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 13:48

Location: Along the Sword Coast, between Waterdeep and Neverwinter
Region: Western Heartlands /North Type: Swamp/Marshland

Overview
The Mere of Dead Men is a vast, fog-covered swamp along the Sword Coast, notorious for its treacherous terrain, undead-haunted waters, and unnatural weather. It stretches for miles inland, with brackish water, sinking ground, and thick vegetation making travel through it slow and dangerous. It's a place few willingly enter, and even fewer return from.
The Mere is infamous for being home to will-o'-wisps, ghouls, banshees, and worse. The air is often filled with mist and strange lights, and ancient ruins lie buried beneath the muck—remnants of older, forgotten settlements or outposts swallowed by time and decay.

History
The Mere of Dead Men was once solid land until 615 DR, when the Battle of the Bones was fought between the orc horde of Wund and a coalition of forces from Waterdeep, Neverwinter, and the dwarves of Illefarn. The orcs were defeated and driven into the lowlands, but the slaughter was immense.
Soon after, the land was drowned—whether due to storms, rising tides, or some unnatural force. The area became the Mere of Dead Men, named for the countless corpses left to rot in its waters. Since then, it has remained a place of death and mystery.
In later centuries, the Mere became a haven for various dark forces. The Cult of the Dragon once operated within its bounds, using it as a hideout and ritual site. In the 15th century DR, the Black Death cult and dragon-related activity also stirred within the Mere, drawing attention from adventurers and factions like the Lord's Alliance.

Wayside Inn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:36

Many enterprising hostellers have tried to maintain an inn where the Triboar Trail meets the High Road. Some have succeeded for many years before falling victim to monsters or bandits. Others have given up relatively quickly, when the dangers become apparent.

The current owner of the Wayside Inn is Martisha Vinetalker, a striking half-elf whose pleasing features contrast with her tough demeanor. She is cold, calculating, charismatic, and knows how to run a business with ruthless efficiency and an eye for profit.

The bartender is Backes Dunfield, a human with a scarred face and a crooked smile. He started working for Martisha six months ago and quickly proved himself a valuable lieutenant.

The cook is Cooragh Struckt, a half-orc who has been a close friend and confidante of Martisha for many years. Cooragh is famous for her incredibly tasty, and alarmingly well-spiced, stews and meat pies.

- Martisha sits in the corner at a lone table, poring over records and watching the business. She answers any attempts at conversation curtly. She wants to partner with the settlers of Leilon to set up a mutual protection pact, as well as a trade pact where she sells her vegetables and livestock in return for the goods they will produce.
- Backes keeps the ale flowing all night for the adventurers. He tells them that he gave up a life as a privateer (that is, a pirate) to get into business on land. He works the bar and assists Martisha, but he hopes to someday open his own place in Neverwinter or Waterdeep. He wears a pendant around his neck in the shape of a trident, which he says the crew of his last ship wore as a way to appease the many sea gods.
- Cooragh only emerges from the kitchen long enough to thank the adventurers and give them a piece of her special pork pie. It is very spicy, but delicious for those who can stomach the burn. On her neck, beneath each ear, are tattoos of curved daggers. If asked, she admits she got them because she knew it would upset her mother, a human from Luskan. It was a foolish youthful folly, she says.
- The smith who works at the Wayside Inn smithy is a strapping woman called Teega who can wield a hammer in each hand like a titan. Her anvil is forged in the shape of a dolphin, and at night she drinks at the bar with the other patrons. She met Backes after his life as a pirate ended, and she hopes to join him in setting up a business in a city at some point. She makes jewelry in her spare time and wears a set of bronze bracers shaped like three lightning bolts. She proudly displays three suits of plate armor that she created, each bearing the same symbol as the design of her bracers.
- A young halfling named Silla Scalesweep sits at a table, humming to herself. She is traveling from Neverwinter to Leilon, hoping to get hired on as a fisher by Valdi Estapaar, the woman in charge of the fishery in the town. She wears her long hair in five braids atop her head, and she is very talkative. She also plays the harmonica quite well and is keen to have an audience.
- Tarbin Tul is a traveling bard who wanders the High Road, seeking new songs to add to his already impressive repertoire. Tarbin sits by the fire, singing along to Silla's ditties on the harmonica. He gladly buys a drink for anyone who helped drive off the undead.

Myar Aralyn

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 17:37

Myar Aralyn was once a veiled sanctuary, a city of impossible grace folded between the waves and the sky. Built in secrecy far from the sightlines of coastal empires, its heart lay deep beneath the surface—glowing halls of mother-of-pearl and volcanic glass woven through kelp forests and reefstone cathedrals. But above, hidden in plain sight, jagged cliffs and coral-covered islets disguised towers, walkways, and watchposts. To passing ships, the city's surface-level presence was no more than a cluster of sea-worn rocks.

Founded in elder days by sea elves and tritons seeking freedom from surface entanglements, Myar Aralyn was always selective in who it welcomed—but not in the way surface folk would assume. Where landbound cities prized purity and order, Myar Aralyn offered sanctuary to merrow who had turned from brutality, to nereids and sea hags who upheld oaths of peace, and to sentient sahuagin, all of whom pledged to live within the laws of the deep. Though tensions simmered, the city held together by quiet covenant and shared purpose: to endure, unseen.

Myar Aralyn's secrecy was no accident of fate or divine shelter—it was engineered. Its surface structures were disguised with living coral growth and illusion magic, anchored to submerged cliffs and reefs far from major shipping lanes. Above, thick mists and dangerous currents kept curious sailors at bay. Below, the city expanded into sea caves and volcanic tunnels, guarded by pact-bound creatures and the promise of exile for any who risked exposure. Outsiders who found it and returned were dismissed as mad or drunk, their tales too strange to believe.

The city stood for centuries at the western edge of what is now the Mere of Dead Men, long before the swamp existed. But as the mainland shifted and conflict began to stir in the lands above, the balance within Myar Aralyn also frayed. Civilized merrow factions grew restless, and a tide cult—once fringe—began gaining traction, led by a triton seer named Jharkhas Vohmarnath. As war raged above between orc hordes and the cities of the Sword Coast, a storm far older than the battlefield gathered strength offshore. The chaos culminated in 615 DR, during the infamous Battle of the Bones. Whether Jharkhas foresaw it or caused it is unknown, but when the land broke and the sea surged in, Myar Aralyn was caught at the boundary—its hidden heights crushed by waves, its lower sanctums buried in salt and silt. The swamp swallowed the ruins without fanfare. To most, the city had never existed, and only the Thunder Cliffs remain.

Thunder Cliffs

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 17:51

The Thunder Cliffs, rising jagged from the western coast just north of the Mere of Dead Men, are all that remain above the waves of Myar Aralyn, the drowned city of secrets. What once served as hidden towers, observatories, and surface outposts for the sea elves and tritons now jut from the rockface like broken teeth—still partly veiled by coral and illusory stone, though the magic has grown unstable. The cave systems beneath the cliffs, long-used by smugglers and seafarers, were originally part of Myar Aralyn's outer corridors—ritual chambers and sea gates now worn hollow by time and tide.
The Cult of Talos has claimed these ruins. Gadrille the Reef-Reaver, a brutal and wildly devout follower of the Storm Lord, has made the Thunder Cliffs her base of operations. Once dismissed as unstable even within the cult, Gadrille's fanaticism has now earned her the full trust of Fheralai Stormsworn. The cliffs serve as both shrine and slaughterhouse. Gadrille and her storm priests lure ships into the shallows using magical reefs and summoned squalls. Wreckage is dragged into the flooded caves and anything valuable is stripped and sold. Survivors are chained, sacrificed, or sold off to fund the cult's broader efforts along the coast and the High Road.
What Gadrille does not fully understand—but Elvar Kurn does—is that these caves are not merely convenient. They are sacred. Once the lungs of Myar Aralyn, they still breathe storm-charged air and pulse with the drowned city's memory. Elvar, ever drawn by Talos's whispers, has followed Yalda to the cliffs, believing that the return of a chosen will awaken something buried below. He speaks rarely, watches constantly, and grows more agitated the deeper they descend.
To the cult, the Thunder Cliffs are a staging ground for future dominion.
To Elvar, they are the mouth of prophecy, and Yalda is the storm waiting to speak.

1. Unsure Shore

The shoreline, where the water meets the sandy beach, crashes with the breaking waves. The echoes formed within the caves reverberate back, filling the air with a sound like the crashing of thunder.

The shore is lined with thin wire treated with a modified version of the alarm spell. Water and other natural circumstances do not trigger the spell, but any humanoid creatures that trip the wires cause an alarm to sound within the caves, alerting the cultists that intruders are present.

The wires can be spotted with a successful DC 15 Wisdom (Perception) check. Getting to shore without tripping the wires is practically impossible, but the wires can be disarmed with a DC 15 Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check, or the alarm spell can be suppressed for an hour using dispel magic.

2. Unhappy Cultists

If the characters are able to approach without tripping the alarm, they might hear some disgruntled cultists talking while they work. If the alarm was tripped, the cultists wait with weapons drawn and cannot be surprised.

If the adventurers get a chance to hear the cultists talking, use the following read-aloud text to portray that conversation:

A severely damaged ship leans against a ledge. Atop the ledge, a handful of workers offload crates, boxes, and barrels from the ship. They grumble and grouse about this menial labor, agreeing that they did not seek the power of the Stormlord to be forced into playing the part of glorified longshoremen.

The cultists here (spies) number two per character, including sidekicks.

A Better Offer?

The party could avoid a fight here if they understand the frustration of the cultists and go in immediately with a better offer. To get the dialogue started on a good note, one of the characters must approach the group and talk to them. A successful DC 15 Charisma (Deception or Persuasion) checks convinces the disgruntled cultists to listen.

The party might also pretend to be other members of the cult who are seeking volunteers to do more exciting work elsewhere. They might offer to kill the current leader and put the workers in charge, or they might come up with a totally different plan.

Whatever the party's tactics allow the roleplaying to carry the encounter until it's time to resolve the situation. If the adventurers make a compelling offer to the cultists, they might do what the party wants with no check. If the outcome is uncertain, have the party make a final ability check to figure what happens. On a failure, the cultists attack.

Success!

On a success, however, the party now has a valuable resource. The cultists are unlikely to turn traitor completely and join the characters, but they might give the characters valuable information about who and what lives in the caves, where the important areas are, and anything else they might need to know.

3. Sea Hag Coven

In this cave, strategically separated from the rest of the complex, a coven of three sea hags carry out their own gruesome plans in alongside those of their anchorite allies.

Accessing the Cave

In order to access this cave, a creature must swim through a submerged tunnel teeming with scary-looking fish. The fish have strange glowing eyes and large teeth, but they are just normal fish that have been mutated through the magic of the hags, and they do not attack swimmers.

The Coven Cave

In the cave, three sea hags chew on the hands and feet of sailors who drowned after being shipwrecked on the magical reefs. The cultists supply the bodies in return for help from the coven when dealing with special problems, and the two forces have an easy mutual-protection pact.

Piles of slimy seaweed act as beds for the three sisters: Nana Pocktuss, Auntie Unk, and Granny Muyuk. The trio is using the inedible parts of the bodies to create assistants that look like flying skulls with long stingers. There is one skull flier per character, excluding sidekicks. You can find the statistics for these creatures in Appendix A.

A Nice Chat

The coven does not attack immediately. They don't get many visitors who aren't boring anchorites or screaming victims, so they invite intruders in for a nice seaweed and squid ink cookie.

Auntie Unk is the newest member of the coven, and she spent her previous years kidnapping people off the High Road and dragging them into the Mere of Dead Men to eat. She misses news of the city and favors anyone who can provide gossip about Waterdeep or Neverwinter.

Nana Pocktuss likes to dance. If any of the characters can play music or dance themselves, Nana Pocktuss appreciates a grand old hoedown to shake the rust (and maggots) out of her old joints.

Granny Muyuk never could turn down a good (or even putrid) drop of grog. If any of the adventurers carry alcohol with them, regardless of its vintage or provenance, Granny Muyuk can smell it and asks for a taste. Those sharing generously earn her favor.

If all three of the hags can be placated by catering to to their particular vices and interests, they are willing to spare the characters a fight, and they might even look the other way as the characters attempt to end the dominance of the Cult of Talos at this location. And if not, they always enjoy a good fight as well.

4. The Dying Second

While the incredibly devout Gadrille the Reef-Reaver leads the group of cultists at the caves, Fheralai Stormsworn assigned a second-in-command to assist her — with special instructions to keep an eye on Gadrille to ensure she doesn't kill all her followers in a fit of mad devotion to Talos. That second-in-command is Sovendahl Erkinze, a drow elite warrior.

Sovendahl's bodyguards (thugs), numbering one per character, including sidekicks, stay with the drow no matter where he goes. And right now, he isn't going very far, because he is suffering from a curse.

Sovendahl's duties involve overseeing the sorting, transportation, and sales of the stolen goods that the rest of the operation steals from wrecked ships. This frees Gadrille do what she loves most: killing others in the name of Talos.

Recently, Sovendahl expressed opposition to some of Gadrille's more enthusiastic endeavors, deeming them too risky and likely to draw the attention of larger and more powerful forces, like the Waterdeep navy. Sovendahl went behind Gadrille's back and urged Fheralai Stormsworn to order Gadrille to stand down. The overzealous Gadrille did as she was told, but she secretly prayed to Talos, asking for a boon in payment for her years of devotion: curse Sovendahl for his cowardly caution. And Talos answered.

The Sick Room

When the characters encounter Sovendahl, he is resting in his quarters His bodyguards sort through the latest haul of stolen and salvaged treasure. Occasionally the drow erupts in a coughing spasm that brings up blood from his lungs. He is worried but tries not to show it.

If combat breaks out here, Sovendahl fights bravely and expertly, but the exertion leads to more coughing. As the fight progresses, describe the drow's spasms of coughing, and blood spraying over the adventurers who face him. (That's something that can scare even the bravest barbarian!) The disease is not communicable, but no one has to know that.

If at any point the characters speak with the drow about his affliction, pointing out that he is sick and in need of assistance, the drow might stop fighting and ask the characters if they can help him. He is willing to walk away from the cult to obtain a cure.

A successful DC 15 Wisdom (Medicine) check reveals that the ailment is not a disease, but a curse. A character who casts remove curse on Sovendahl earns the drow's thanks. As a reward, the he gives the characters a magic item has been storing away: a dagger of venom.

Treasure. If the characters kill Sovendahl and his bodyguards, they do not find the magical dagger, which is hidden carefully in a secret location outside the caves. They do, however, get 250 gp in various coins, 3 potions of greater healing, and a jade brooch worth 500 gp.

5. The Cultist's Quarters

The cultists of Talos working under Gadrille the Reef-Reaver don't get a lot of time for relaxation and socializing. They spend most of their time out on the sea, luring unsuspecting ships into the reef, then salvaging the wreckages. Gadrille's motto is "if you're not reavin' in service to Talos, you're sleepin' in service to Talos."

This area is where the cultists of the lowest standing sleep and eat. At any time, there are eight scouts here, sleeping in four bunk beds that line the walls, or eating their fish broth at the table in the center of the room before heading out to perform their tasks. The cultists here when the characters arrive are dedicated to their god and will not surrender or negotiate.

The Blowhole

In an alcove to the north of the room is a special feature that the occupants of the cave call "the blowhole." This vertical shaft runs both beneath the water and up into the cave ceiling.

When Gadrille believes a cultist is lacking the proper amount of faith to be a true servant of Talos, the cultist is dragged here and tossed into the water of the blowhole to be judged. Sometimes they are pulled down into the bottom of the shaft, sometimes a geyser of water blows them up through the top of the shaft, and sometimes nothing happens. If nothing happens, Gadrille takes that as a sign Talos approves.

The truth is that the blowhole is a magical portal. When a living creature enters the blowhole, roll a d10. On a 1-8, nothing happens. On a 9, the creature is pulled down into the shaft, through a portal, and appears moments later floating in Waterdeep Harbor, alive and well. On a 10, the creature is pushed up through the ceiling by the geyser. With a successful DC 10 Strength saving throw, a creature can grab onto the side of the shaft and avoid getting pushed through the portal. On a failure, the creature tumbles through a portal at the top of the shaft and ends up in the Elemental Plane of Water. (Perhaps a passing marid takes pity on the creature and uses plane shift to return it home — for a price!)

The party can learn about the magic of the blowhole in a number of ways:

- One of the disgruntled anchorites tells the character about Gadrille's cruelty in dealing with those she deems unworthy.
- A successful DC 15 Intelligence (Investigation) check of the area reveals scrape marks around the blowhole, where people have grabbed hold while attempting to keep from getting sent away.
- Characters succeeding on a DC 15 Intelligence (Arcana) checks notices the magical emanations within the blowhole, revealing that it contains teleportation magic.
- A character steps into the blowhole and suffers the effects of the area.

6. Loot

This central chamber is where the loot to be sold or transported is packaged and stored. When ready, it's carried down to the shore, loaded onto ships operated by the Cult of Talos, and taken to its final destination.

When the characters arrive, there is no one here, but there are several closed crates awaiting transport. Most of the crates contain commercial goods like cloth, crafted goods, spices, and other trade items. Each of the crates is marked with chalk describing the contents. One of the crates, with a chalk marking that says "Gold," is trapped.

Trap

Sovendahl fears that some of the cultists might be stealing from the stockpiles of goods for sale, so he placed a crate here that might be tempting to a thief.

The crate marked “Gold” is full of rocks, and there are tiny runes on the edge of the lid, which can be noticed with a DC 20 Intelligence (Investigation) check. The runes can be deactivated with a dispel magic spell, or carefully filed away with a DC 15 Dexterity (Sleight of Hand) check.

If the crate is opened without deactivating the runes, it explodes. Any creature within 10 feet of the crate must succeed on a DC 15 Constitution saving throw, taking 8d8 thunder damage on a failed save, or half as much on a success. The creatures within the blast radius are also covered in green ink that only comes off with repeated scrubbing over the course of months.

Treasure. The rest of the crates here contain about 2000 gp worth of trade goods. However, they are heavy and unwieldy, requiring a good-sized ship to transport them all to a place where they could be sold.

7. Gadrille the Reef-Reaver

Gadrille the Reef-Reaver is a female half-elf evoker. She spends most of her time out with her followers, preying on those too weak to withstand the ravaging power of Talos. When in the caves, however, she is in her chambers praying.

Talos has rewarded Gadrille for her devotion with a pet, whom she calls “Tooth-N-Claw.” This beast uses hell hound statistics but replace fire with cold in attacks and immunities. Tooth-N-Claw is ferociously protective of Gadrille. If there are more than four characters, excluding sidekicks, add a second pet called “Frost-N-Fang.”

Swirling Pool Chamber

In the center of this chamber is a large roiling boil of water. Gadrille likes to soak in it, feeling the power of Talos course through her when she does. If a creature not favored by Talos enters the pool or starts its turn there, it takes 4d10 psychic damage.

Shrine Chamber

This area is Gadrille’s private shrine. In addition to the carved limestone likeness of Talos in one corner, the walls are carved with images of Talos’s destructive power. Moving within the chamber is like moving through difficult terrain unless you are a worshipper of Talos. Taking an action to say a prayer to Talos and succeeding on a DC 15 Intelligence (Religion) check, allows a creature to move normally in the room for 1 minute.

Treasury. Gadrille stores her personal wealth here, including a chest with 300 gp, three ornate matching silver daggers worth a total of 500 gp, a ring of warmth, a wand of magic missiles, and a potion of vitality.

Aftermath

If the characters can defeat Gadrille and her cultists’ salvage operation, they have struck a great blow to the plans of the Cult of Talos in the immediate area. Plans to create shrines along the High Road are scrapped for the near future, and the heroes of Leilon can return to their new home for a well-deserved rest. And they’ll need it, because evil, unlike them, never rests.

Shard of the Moon

Friday, 18 July 2025 18:03

Used to be called the Shard of Night when it was a temple of Shar. It is now dedicated to Selûne.

Selûne

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:04

Selûne is the goddess of the moon, stars, and night sky in the Forgotten Realms, revered as a symbol of guidance, change, and protection in darkness. She represents compassion, mystery, and the balance between light and shadow. Her followers include healers, navigators, and those who seek hope in the dark—especially outsiders and the lost. Selûne is often in cosmic opposition to Shar, her sister and goddess of darkness and loss, reflecting the eternal struggle between light and shadow. Her symbols include a pair of eyes, a moonbow, or the crescent moon.

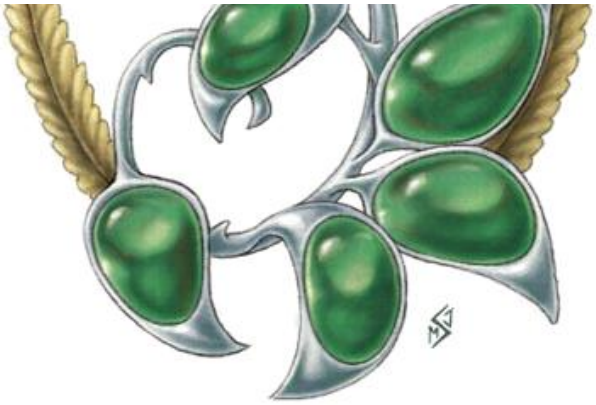

Chauntea

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:16

Chauntea is the goddess of agriculture, growth, and the natural cycle of life in the Forgotten Realms. Known as the Great Mother or Earthmother, she is worshipped by farmers, gardeners, and rural folk who depend on the land. Chauntea represents fertility, nourishment, and the peaceful, steady rhythms of nature. Her faith emphasizes balance with the land, respect for life, and the importance of hard work and community. Her symbols often include sheaves of grain or blooming plants.

Immolin

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:36

A deity of competition, rivalry and dedication worshipped not by a specific culture but by many individuals across the continent, coming from wildly different backgrounds and cultures. Aspect of Lathander.

Lathander

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:37

Lathander, the Morninglord, is the god of dawn, renewal, creativity, and vitality. He brings hope to those seeking change, redemption, or a new beginning, and his light stirs the hearts of artists, healers, nobles, and reformers alike. His faith teaches that each sunrise is a sacred chance to better the world—through beauty, compassion, or bold action. Temples dedicated to him are bright and welcoming, and his clerics are known for their energy, mercy, and unshakable optimism. His symbol is the rising sun, and his name is often spoken at birth, at new ventures, and at the start of great journeys.

Talos

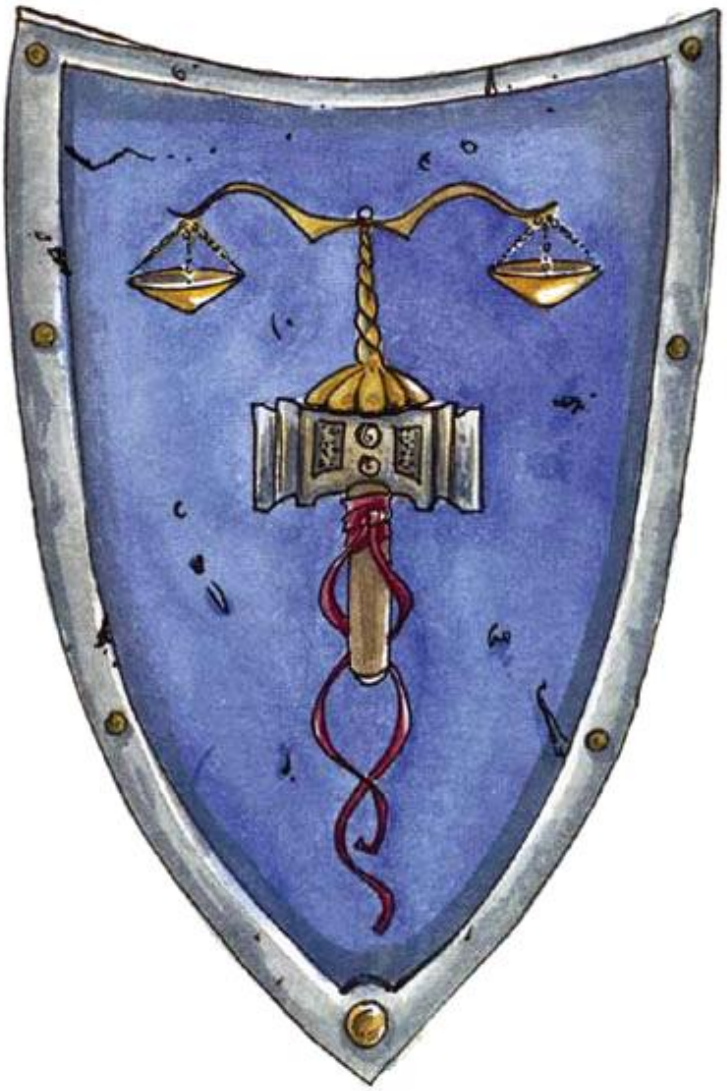

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 03:43

Talos, the Storm Lord, is the god of destruction, storms, and wild, unbridled power. He is the howling wind that shatters towns, the lightning that sets forests ablaze, and the crashing wave that swallows ships whole. Where Chauntea nurtures life and Lathander offers hope, Talos reminds mortals how quickly it can all be taken away. His presence is feared across Faerûn, for his wrath is unpredictable and his joy lies in ruin. Worshippers of Talos are drawn to chaos, conflict, and dominance. Some are fanatics who revel in destruction for its own sake—raiders, stormcallers, and mad prophets who see natural disasters as sacred acts. Others offer him prayers out of fear, hoping to placate him and divert his wrath. His clergy often lead lives on the edge of civilization, stirring unrest, toppling order, and embracing the raw forces of nature without apology or restraint. Temples to Talos are rare in settled lands and are often outlawed, but hidden shrines can be found wherever ruin has touched the world. His holy symbol—three lightning bolts radiating from a point—marks sites of devastation or serves as a grim warning to those who would defy him.Though many call him a destroyer and a tyrant, Talos sees himself as a force of cleansing and renewal—tearing down the stagnant to make way for the primal and the strong. In his eyes, only through destruction can true power and freedom emerge.

Tyr

Wednesday, 30 April 2025 14:57

Unyielding justice in a world of grey—Tyr is law, sacrifice, and the blade that falls fairly.

The Even-Handed, the Maimed God, the Just God
Alignment: Lawful Good
Domains: War, Order
Symbol: Balanced scales resting on a warhammer
Worshippers: Judges, paladins, magistrates, lawkeepers, those who seek justice

Overview:
Tyr is the god of justice, law, and righteous warfare. He represents impartial judgment, the fair rule of law, and self-sacrifice in the pursuit of what is right. Revered by judges, paladins, and those who uphold order in the face of chaos, Tyr is often invoked when hard decisions must be made, especially those that place principle above personal cost.
Teachings:
Tyr's faith teaches that justice must be served without bias, and that even the gods themselves must submit to law. His priests often act as arbiters, settling disputes and defending the innocent. Tyr values honesty, courage, and discipline—expecting his followers to act with honor even in the face of certain death.
Depiction and Legacy:
Tyr is often shown as a blindfolded warrior with a missing right hand—the price he paid to ensure order during the divine struggles of ages past. He once stood at the heart of the Triad alongside Torm and Ilmater, but his faith has waned in recent times. Yet in places where law holds fast, and good men and women stand against cruelty, Tyr's name still carries weight.

Shar

Friday, 2 May 2025 00:16

"I am nothing. I am the empty room. The dreamless sleep. The shadow's shadow. There was no pain before my sister set the sun aflame. Now you exist to suffer until you find your way back to my embrace."
— Shar

Shar, also known as Mistress of the Night and the Lady of Loss, was the goddess of darkness and the night in the Faerûnian pantheon and the malevolent twin sister and counterpart to the goddess of the moon, Selûne. In the 14th and 15th centuries DR, she held the portfolios of darkness, forgetfulness, loss, and night and after she slew the underground god Ibrandul she claimed the portfolios of caverns, dungeons, and the Underdark. In the time of ancient Netheril, Shar also held the portfolios of hatred, sleep, nightmares, illusions, lies, trickery, hiding places, betrayal, treachery, seduction, thieves, thievery, murder, winter, before she lost these to other deities.

Shar was the goddess of darkness, not only as the absence of light but also as the metaphorical darkness that dwelled in one's heart, mind, and soul. The domain of the Mistress of the Night was not only that of dark places, but of deeds done under darkness, of secrets, loss, hidden pain, and wanting to forget. She was also the creator of the Shadow Weave, a dark counterpart and attack upon the Weave of Mystryl and her successors, before both of the Weaves fell into ruin during the Spellplague.

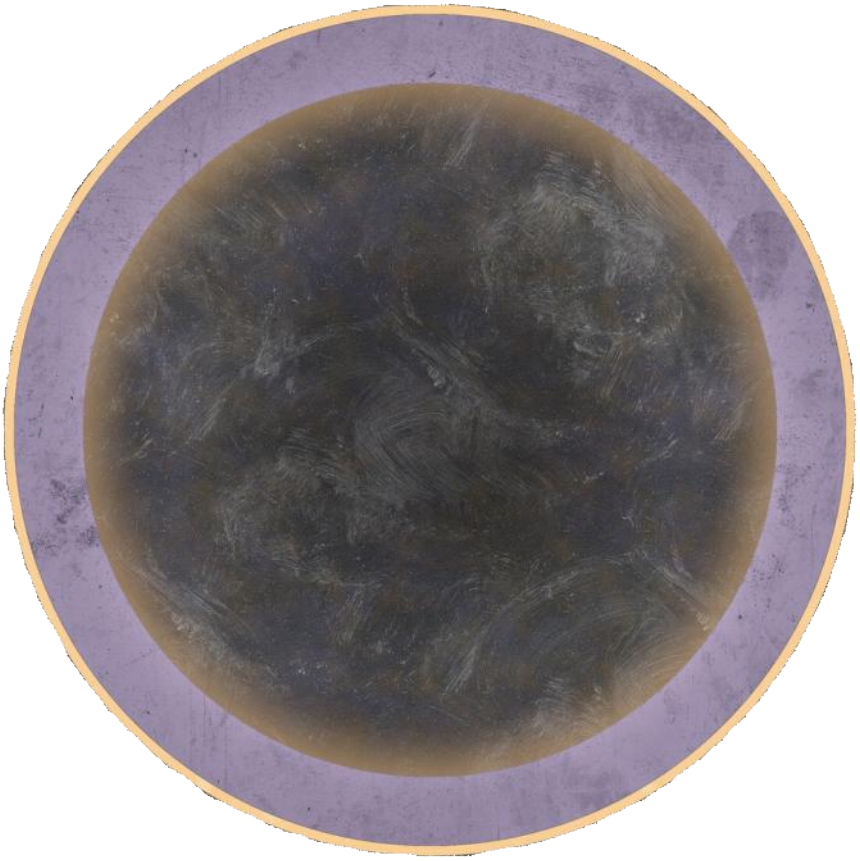

A force of destruction and darkness, the very existence of Shar was paradoxical; the Nightbringer was brought into existence by the creation of Realmspace, but was the living embodiment of the void, the perfect nothing that existed before she was born. The emptiness that she originally reflected had itself been erased at the start of time, and she longed to return to the ancient calm of nonexistence. And so she would disrupt order, bring down established systems, and undo everything.

By her very nature, Shar was defined by loss, the foolishness of hope, and life's inherent emptiness. She was a goddess of pains and wrongs kept hidden yet never forgotten, of concealed hatred and unnatural desires that lurked in one's heart, of nursed grudges and hungered-for revenge cultivated in secret for any slight or offense, however old and cold it was. She enjoyed concealing things and keeping secrets for their own sake, so they never saw the light of day. Her tools were temptation, subterfuge, trickery, clandestine deals, schemes, and manipulations and, to her, the means were always justified by the ends.

The depths of Shar's evil were too extreme to be described by words. She was deeply twisted and perverse, a being of ceaseless, petty hate and jealousy. She plotted from the shadows to undermine all creation. Though she was not chaotic herself, like her sister was, Shar nonetheless sought to destroy all order. Even her own devoted worshipers were simply pawns in her

Her holy symbol is a black disc ringed with deep purple.

In the time of ancient Netheril, Shar had two different holy symbols. One was a glistening eye, purple with a black pupil and outlined in black. The other was a cowled cloak designed for hunting, black and plain and spread out flat.

Although Shar purported to be a healer, soothing the grief-stricken by letting them forget their woes, she was in truth a sadist, and enjoyed inflicting the pain of loss on her worshipers. Her alleged help was not release from that pain, but numbness to it, the acceptance of it as normal and the removal of any expectation otherwise. The Lady of Loss did not truly believe in healing grief, not even her own, but in harnessing it, in nurturing spite, nursing indignity, and reinforcing regret until minor slights, at least in one's own mind, become transgressions worthy of bitter vengeance. She taught her faithful to be cynical, that they could not look for any good in the world, nor in themselves.
